Mehales Tsigourakos, Crazed by Fear of Electric Chair, Sees Victim Alive

Nearly crazed with fear of capital punishment, Mehales Tsigourakos, who on Dec. 2 stabbed and nearly killed Geo. Davis, a fellow workman at the Appleton mill, has been the cause of considerable anxiety on the part of the jail officials until this morning, when he was effectively and noisily reassured that his life is in no danger. Tsigourakos was arraigned in the superior court this morning, the charge against him being assault with intent to kill, and for the fourth or fifth time his case was continued to the recovery of the officials who were reported as doing very well at the Lowell hospital. Today, Keeper Evelev of the jail appeared in court and told a story which caused the officials there to sit up and take notice. It was this: In some manner, the prisoner became possessed of the idea that his victim had died, and that, therefore, he was a murderer and would be punished by death in the electric chair. Constant worry over this and growing fear was evidently driving the youth insane and all of the assurances of those in charge of the institution who told him that Davis was still alive, could not comfort him. He acted very strangely in his cell, and was observed uttering his head against the heavy iron bars and solid walls. The terror of the prisoner can be easily imagined; his going to bed at night with visions of the death chair looming up before him, his nightmares, and his awakening each morning with the grating fear in his mind, until he was on the verge of losing his mind.

On hearing this story, the police hit upon a plan by which the fears of the young man would be laid to rest, and that was to have him taken to the Lowell hospital to see his victim alive. They decided to do this and told Tsigourakos of their intention and he seemed satisfied. Consequently, at the conclusion of the police court session this morning he was placed in the police patrol auto with the others who were to be taken to the jail, and the machine was first driven to the Lowell hospital. Arriving there, Constable Harry Demarais took the young man within and together with the doctor in charge they proceeded to look up Geo. Davis. He was finally found in one of the large bedrooms in bed, enjoying the fresh air. Tsigourakos hastened to his bedside and leaning over him kissed him and in his native tongue, begged him forgiveness. The other looked up at him and said that he had nothing against him and would forgive him, and would do nothing further if God saw fit to have him continue to live. The relief of the prisoner was pathetic and he wept piously in his joy at learning that the other was alive after all.

On the way back to the jail in the patrol, he said that someone had told him that Davis had died. Now that he knew otherwise, he said he would be all right. He nodded and smiled when the other said, "Brace up now."

Non-Support Case
An old non-supporter of his wife, Lewis Whipple, who has appeared several times, it is said, and the last time was saved from going to jail by the plea of his wife's mother, was in court again today when it was charged that he had neglected all warnings and had failed to make good when given a chance to reform.

His wife on the stand said that since his last appearance in court he has not given her money nor contributed in any way to her support. She testified that she took her meals in a restaurant and paid for them out of her own money earned by herself.

Joseph Liberty, Mrs. Whipple's brother, in a large measure corroborated the statements of the complainant.

The suspension of his sentence was revoked and the sentence of four months in jail was affirmed. He entered an appeal.

James Larkin appeared and expressed a desire to withdraw his appeal made recently and his wish was granted. Sentence to the state farm being confirmed.

Daniel Doherty who appeared yesterday and paid a two dollar fine, was in court this morning on another charge of drunkenness and was taxed six dollars.

The wife of Stanislaus Krzystyniak appeared in court to testify that her husband got drunk every Saturday night and abused her. He was fined six dollars and taken to a severe lecture and warning from the court.

Miss Margaret received a sentence of three months in jail; a man named McCarthy pleaded not guilty to drunkenness and was held to tomorrow's session for trial, his bail being fixed at $200.

Accused of Murder, Arson, Robbery and Other Felonies---4 Members of Band Found Not Guilty

PARIS, Feb. 27.—The trial of the 22 auto bandits who held Paris in terror for months ended today after occupying the court for 21 days, with a verdict of guilty against 18 of them on counts including murder, arson, robbery and many other felonies. Four of the accused, including three women accomplices, were found not guilty.

The case has taken precedence in public attention over the recent presidential election, the Balkan war and the Mexican revolution.

Charged With 22 Murders
Among the indictments brought against the prisoners were no fewer than 22 murders, their victims being motor drivers, bank messengers, freight agents and policemen. They held up a number of suburban banks, broke into the residences of prominent people, killed the chauffeurs, and burned down houses and buildings and finally when their two leaders, Bannet and Gannier, were in danger of arrest, underwent two sieges in the environs of Paris in the course of which it was found necessary to call out hundreds of troops, whole squadrons of military mounted police and practically the entire force of policemen, who bombarded them for many hours in their sanctuaries and then found several of the leading spirits of the gang lying dead, riddled with bullets.

Commenced Suicide
Even the conclusion of their trial was accompanied by further tragedies, for Carony, the anarchist bandit, when he learned that he was condemned to imprisonment for life, committed suicide immediately after he had been taken back to his cell in the Conger prison by King's men, by means of a razor.

When they returned into court their written verdict was found so incoherent, contradictory and lengthy that it had to be explained to the presiding judge by the foreman before it could be read.

At the conclusion of the reading the spectators were stirred by the counsel for four of the bandits—Dieudonne, Callemine, Souly and Monier springing up from their seats declaring that it was illegal for the presiding judge to ask the jury for oral explanations after they had written their verdicts. They entered a strong protest against such procedure. Their clients by the verdict of the jury were rendered liable to the death penalty and this was a last effort to avert or postpone their fate.

Another dramatic incident occurred after the court had deliberated on the protests by prisoners' counsel and decided against them on a point of law.

The presiding judge turned to the accused and asked them if they had anything more to say before sentence was pronounced upon them.

Admits Killings Bank Messengers
Callemine, who had been found guilty of murder, sprang from his seat between the republican guards and shouted:

"My comrade, Dieudonne, was not the assassin of the bank messenger Cabry. It was I and my chief, Gannier."

This admission caused a tremendous sensation in view of the fact that Cabry had repeatedly asserted that he was Dieudonne who had shot him.

The court retired again to deliberate at half past seven.

Bandits Sentenced
Four of the bandits were sentenced today to death by the guillotine. The condemned men are Dieudonne, Callemine, Souly and Monier, against whom a number of murders were proved. Fourteen of the others were sentenced to various terms of imprisonment.

Municipal Council to Fix Appropriations—Mayor O'Donnell On Deck Again

Mayor O'Donnell was at his office at city hall this morning and though his voice has not yet regained its full scope and power he says he is feeling first rate. The mayor, who has been in bed since he received an invitation to dine with the legislative committee on education at the Richardson hotel, Friday evening, the committee, as was stated in The Sun yesterday, is coming to Lowell to visit the textile school. The mayor is a member ex-officio of the board of trustees of the Lowell Textile school and Mr. Barrett, too, by virtue of his office as president of the municipal council.

Estimates for Year
The next meeting of the municipal council is scheduled for Saturday forenoon at 10 o'clock and it is expected that the meeting will be quite an important one. It was stated today that in all probability the question of appropriations for the year would be taken up. Another important matter, the lighting question, has been pending for some time and the council may tackle the proposition at its Saturday meeting. The Bulletin hearing, so called, will not be resumed until Tuesday.

Auto Fire Apparatus
All of the motor propelled fire apparatus in Lowell with the exception of the Robinson machine, which is located at the Race street fire house, are in commission and the statement was made that the Robinson machine was not put in active service because the Robinson company said they wanted to see the color of Lowell's money before the machine was used.

Asked if it was true that the Robinson company demanded a check before the machine was put into active service, Mr. Barrett said there was no foundation in fact for the statement.

"The Knox and the Seagraves machines are in active service, are they not?" asked the reporter.

"Yes, the Knox machine has been

as he left the courtroom.

The trial has been attended by all sorts of dramatic incidents. The jurors were threatened time and again with assassination by accomplices of the accused. Many of the 204 witnesses also were menaced and even while they were on the witness stand slurs were made to them in court that they would suffer for giving testimony.

Judges Guarded
The court itself was surrounded by a large force of republican guards and judges and jurymen were placed under special supervision and provided with strong escorts whenever they left the building.

When the taking of evidence was brought to a close and the prosecution and defense had delivered their addresses and the jury had retired, a tremor of excitement passed over the spectators in the court room for threats were mysteriously put into circulation that something terrible would happen. Nothing, however, occurred.

The jury remained out from 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon until nearly 1 o'clock this morning. They had to consider a series of nearly 400 questions which had been submitted to them.

Judge Explained Verdict
When they returned into court their written verdict was found so incoherent, contradictory and lengthy that it had to be explained to the presiding judge by the foreman before it could be read.

At the conclusion of the reading the spectators were stirred by the counsel for four of the bandits—Dieudonne, Callemine, Souly and Monier springing up from their seats declaring that it

A burglar managed to gain entrance to Nelson's department store at the corner of Central and Merrimack streets last night and secured a sum of money amounting to about $20 from seven of the cash registers in the basement. He left no clue as to his identity.

Mr. Edwards, manager of the store, said today that the thief in all probability entered the place before closing time last night and secreted himself within until everyone had left the store. This he said would be an easy matter for anyone familiar with the interior of the store, because of the many corners, counters, tables, stairways, etc., which afford good hiding places. Another circumstance which seems to support this theory is that the rear door of the building which leads into the receiving room, was found open sometime early this morning by Officer Connolly, the policeman on that beat. This door fastened by a sliding bolt on the inside and so could not be opened from the outside, and it would have been practically impossible for anyone to gain entrance through the front door undetected. All circumstances seem to point to the theory that the thief concealed himself within the store last evening and after all the employees had left the establishment, looted the cash registers in the basement and then made his getaway through the rear door, unbolting it with ease from the inside and leaving it open after him.

The burglar took only the bills from the cash registers and left the small change. From one of the registers which contained $1.19, the dollar bill was taken and the ten cents disregarded. Either he did not care to bother with the metal money or he thought that he would be caught if he tried to dispose of a lot of dimes, nickels, quarters, etc. As far as could be seen, $20 was the extent of the loss. The matter was reported at once to the police, who are making every effort to arrest the thief.

in commission ever since it reached Lowell and the Seagraves was put in active service yesterday," said Mr. Barrett.

When what is the matter with the Robinson? was the next query.

"I am not an automobile expert," said Mr. Barrett, "and I do not want to engage in argument with automobile experts, but to my way of thinking, the differential gears on the Robinson machine are not what they should be. I may be absolutely wrong in this; perhaps a little more, but I am going to satisfy myself that they are all right before the machine is put in active service. I have sent two or three automobile men to look the machine over and they reported that everything is all right. I am going to send two or three more and if they agree that everything is all right, then I will allow that I was laboring under a wrong impression."

Board of Health Horses
Mayor O'Donnell has borrowed a couple of horses from Commissioner Barrett for the health department. The mayor has not borrowed the horses yet, as a matter of fact, but Mr. Barrett said he thought he could accommodate him.

"No use in talking," said the mayor, "we will have to buy horses for the board of health. Most of the horses used by the board today are absolutely unfit. Five of them were shot last year, with old age as an excuse, and none of them should be put out of the way or 'spooned' as a reporter put it, but the mayor didn't acquiesce. He allowed, however, that it might be well to provide a home for them for the rest of their lives. 'You know,' he said, 'we have about all the pensions that we can very well care for at the present time,' and, as luck would have it, City Messenger Monahan, at that very moment, announced to the mayor that a policeman and fireman were waiting in the messenger's office to see him. As Squire McVey would say—'Do you follow me?'"

The story of the "indigent" horses in the health department rather stirred the heart of the scribe and he ventured to the board of health office to find out more about them. "There's a list of the horses of the department in our annual report," said Agent Bates, and he told the scribe where to find the report. The scribe went down the list and found that about all of the horses were old enough to vote. About half of the horses in the department are over 25 and two or three of them have reached the 37th milestone in life's highway. These horses ought not to work and if it seems a bit inhuman to kill them, they might be sent to Red Oak farm.

Contract For Lumber
Bids for a considerable amount of lumber have been opened at the office of the purchasing agent and the following bids were received: Davis & Sargent, $1290; Pratt & Forrest, $1267; Amasa Pratt Co., $1235; Burnham & Davis, $1216.50; and Burnham & Davis got the contract.

Bids were also opened on brushes for the school department, but the contract has not been awarded because Purchasing Agent Foye wishes to see the brushes before making the award. The contract calls for at least as good a brush as being used at the present time and the purchasing agent is from Missouri. Bids on hardware for the lands and buildings were received as follows: Adams Hardware Co., $56.58; J. C. Bennett, $62; Bartlett & Dow, $65; W. T. S. Bartlett, $67.83; E. D. Smith, $69.17; Thompson Hardware Co., $72.50; J. A. Thompson, $52.

PROGRESSIVE PARTY
Will Organize Ward Committees To Look After Its Interests in Lowell—Meeting Tomorrow Night

The progressives of Lowell will meet tomorrow night at the New American hotel for the purpose of selecting a city progressive committee. Mr. Leonard Martin of Boston has arrived in town and, as the representative of the state chairman of the party, will see to it that the details of the new organization which will be formed tomorrow night, Mr. Peters of Boston will also be present in the organization of the local committee.

It is planned to form this committee with five members of each ward in the city. They in turn to elect their own officers for the ensuing year.

DORR MAY HEAR HIS FATE TODAY

Trial of Accused Murderer Nearly Ended—Appeared Much Refreshed in Court Today

SALFEM, Feb. 27.—When William A. Dorr came into court today to hear the arguments for and against his conviction on the charge of murdering George E. Marsh of Lynn he appeared much refreshed from his night's rest. During his description yesterday of the shooting of Marsh, which he claims was done in self defense, his recent attitude showed the effects of his recent attack of tennisitis. This morning he walked briskly to his seat in the prisoners' cage and immediately entered into an animated conference with his attorneys. District Attorney Atwill, who is conducting the case for the commonwealth had announced that he had two witnesses to call in rebuttal before Attorney Neil Barney began his argument for his defense.

Three members of the Lynn police force testified in rebuttal that there were no blood stains in the automobile, but there was blood on the ground where Marsh's body was found.

Dorr's testimony that he rode about for some time with the body of Marsh propped up beside him in the auto, was attacked by the prosecution through testimony of Medical Examiner J. P. Prindleham of Lynn, who said that all rigidity left the neck immediately after death and that a man's head would not stay in an upright position after death and so retain a hat in a natural position as described by Dorr.

He also gave further testimony regarding the cuts and bruises on Marsh's head, claiming that a blow such as the dead man apparently received could not have been made while he wore a hat without receiving some mark on the hat.

In his closing argument, Attorney Barney laid particular stress upon the contention of the defense that the murder was not committed in the county where the trial is being held, but in the town of Revere, which is in Suffolk county.

"The state has presented no positive evidence that the crime was committed in Essex county," he said. "One witness has testified that the car of the defendant and Marsh's came were found 40 or 50 feet apart and they might easily have fallen from the automobile as it moved along the boulevard. None of the detectives engaged on the case was able to find any evidence of the definite spot where Marsh was killed. The man was killed in the automobile and the only evidence as to where the machine was at the time the shots were fired has been given by the defendant himself. He says the shooting took place in Revere."

George E. Marsh went to his death without knowing that through a mistake in the trust deed, Dorr's aunt, Orpha Marsh, had been deprived of her property, Mr. Barney declared.

The title to the estate which was intended to revert to Orpha Marsh was in the name of George E. Marsh but Marsh didn't know it," he said. "Dorr knew this, for he had searched the records and had employed counsel to examine the titles. There was no motive for Dorr to kill Mr. Marsh, but every reason why he should want to preserve and protect that life."

George E. Crane, the Stockton, Cal., man who had the management of the Marsh property, was described by Mr. Barney as one who "came east to testify against a man who had tried to get away from him, Crane, the care of Miss Marsh's property."

Attorney Barney said that Dorr did not hide himself when he came to Lynn. "He walked around the streets and stood about and he even told the man from whom he purchased the automobile that he came from California," he said.

Dorr Diary Attacked
Continuing Mr. Barney's reference to the diary, "I am sure the jurors are satisfied that the man who wrote that diary was beside himself, possessed of an impulse which he could not control. The defendant does not ask you to acquit him on the ground of insanity. He simply claims the diary to be a record of his remorse and sorrow at what he had done. It is the outpouring of an unsound mind. If it was his daily record the jury might acquit him on the ground of insanity. It was the work of a mind beside itself."

Mr. Barney argued that in days gone by innocent women had confessed to witchcraft and been sent to their death in the very city in which Dorr was being tried for his life. "Many men and women have before now confessed to crimes that they never committed," he said.

Referring to the remark which the defendant testified Marsh made while in the auto and which he, Dorr, interpreted as a reflection on his aunt, Barney said:

"There was nothing else that Dorr could do as a gentleman except get out of the automobile. He started to get out but Marsh pulled him back and then started the trouble which culminated in the shooting. When Dorr fired the revolver Marsh laid his hands upon his throat and Dorr had no thought except to protect himself."

State Must Prove Guilt
In closing Mr. Barney said that there was no premeditation in the case on the part of the defendant. He called attention to his hitherto unblemished reputation and appealed for fairness and calmness in reaching a verdict, impressing upon the jury that it was no incumbent upon the prisoner to prove his innocence but that the commonwealth must prove guilt beyond reasonable doubt.

As Mr. Barney took his seat, Dist. Attorney Atwill rose and began the closing argument for the state.

CHARTER HEARING
The Lowell Board of Trade Will Be Represented at the State House Tomorrow

A petition on the bill accompanying the hearing of John F. Donnelly and others for legislation to revise the charter of the city of Lowell and especially to provide for the election of a mayor, nine aldermen and nine school committee-men for one year terms will be given by the legislative committee on cities at the state house tomorrow forenoon at 10:30 o'clock.

Asked today if he would attend the hearing, Mayor O'Donnell answered in the negative. It was stated by other members of the council that they would not attend the hearing and City Solicitor Hennessy said he had not received any instructions relative to the hearing. The Lowell board of trade will be represented at the hearing by Secretary John H. Murphy and William N. Geococq, chairman of the legislative committee.

Petitioned Into Bankruptcy
BOSTON, Feb. 27.—The crude rubber firm of George Alden & Co. of Boston was petitioned into bankruptcy today by four creditors, including George Walkington of Rockville Center, N. Y.

The company made a general assignment on Feb. 11 to Archibald Blanchard, A. H. Brooks and W. L. Wadleigh. Judge Morton of the United States district court subsequently appointed the three assignees receivers for the George A. Alden Co. and fixed their bonds at $50,000.

Municipal Council to Fix Appropriations—Mayor O'Donnell On Deck Again

Mayor O'Donnell was at his office at city hall this morning and though his voice has not yet regained its full scope and power he says he is feeling first rate. The mayor, who has been in bed since he received an invitation to dine with the legislative committee on education at the Richardson hotel, Friday evening, the committee, as was stated in The Sun yesterday, is coming to Lowell to visit the textile school. THE MEN'S HOSPITAL AT THE STATE INFIRMARY

Through the efforts of Dr. Alfred Nichols, superintendent of the State Infirmary in Tewksbury, what is known as the kindergarten system for the insane has been started at the institution under the supervision of Miss Mary Leonard, who has had considerable experience in this particular line of work, which is sure to prove beneficial to the many inmates. The system includes a little work and considerable exercise, especially on doors, to which the patients who are but feebly insane devote their attention most willingly for several hours a day.

The form of employment is found to be highly beneficial to the patients because one of the great needs of the insane is diversion from the line of thought on which their minds run. Some are insane on religion, some on family affairs, while others are subject to phases on which they dwell upon all kinds of subjects. The work introduced is light and it is new to all the patients. Even some who had been considered dangerous, when engaged in this manner have forgotten the things that troubled them before and thus their minds are relieved. In fact it is a new remedy and one that gives great promise of successful results.

Miss Leonard, who was formerly kindergarten teacher at the River Street kindergarten in Haverhill, Mass., is well versed with this work and knows how to handle her patients, whether dangerous or not, and so far she is well mastering them. She is a sister to Prof. William Ellery Leonard of the Wisconsin University, and a daughter of Rev. William L. Leonard, now of Madison, Wis. She has been in the institution for over a month, and she is very much pleased with the results thus far obtained.

While conversing with the writer, Miss Leonard said the work introduced in the kindergarten department consists mostly of weaving by hand, that each inmate is supplied with a small roll of cloth which is perforated, and each is also given a shoe lacing. Miss Leonard teaches each one to weave this shoe lacing into the material, and she says it takes but a short time before the patients in her care can do the work unassisted. They are also taught to sew and other kinds of light work can be done in the interior. At 11 o'clock every forenoon the kindergarten sits at the piano in the large hall and the inmates in rows of rows march up and down the hall to a march played on the instrument, and this part of the program especially is very pleasing to them.

They are also given marches around the yard, and some of them pretty soon will be given each a small patch of flowers to take care of. Those who were considered the most stupid have been so trained that now their teacher can leave them to do almost anything. Every other Monday Miss Leonard of this city calls at the institution and provides an entertainment for the women. Sometimes the program is carried out by talent from the infirmary, while on other occasions Miss O'Connell goes with her own singers and musicians. The patients are also taught dancing and this, too, they seem to favor.

When the patients in the care of Miss Leonard have improved enough to be trusted with some kind of work alone, they are turned over to Miss Griffith, who has charge of the Industrial department for women, and there they are given all sorts of light and easy work to do. Some will crochet, others will mend clothes, and thus the work is distributed.

This work is done under most healthful conditions in the largest ward in the building with the sun shining in and the windows open to admit fresh air. This mode of treatment being entirely new will be watched with considerable interest by physicians and experts upon insanity. The system of

REASONABLE RESTRAINTS OF TRADE

Supreme Court's Modification of Sherman Anti-Trust Law Vigorously Attacked

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—The Supreme Court's modification of the Sherman anti-trust law to invoke the rule of reason in decisions on restraints of trade is being attacked in vigorous terms in a report presented to the Senate by the Interstate Commerce Commission today which points out the dangers of uncontrolled and unregulated judicial discretion and makes a emphatic demand for amendments to the Sherman law to remove from the courts the power to determine what are "reasonable restraints of trade."

The committee recommends new laws to define exactly what combinations are unlawful so that both the business interests and the courts will have a standard upon which to proceed. It recommends a federal interstate corporation commission with power to supervise corporations, pass on and approve combinations and agreements and take over the work of dissolving illegal corporations such as the Standard Oil Co. or the American Tobacco Co. Commenting upon the decision of the Supreme Court in the Standard Oil case in which the "rule of reason" was called in, the report, written by Senator Cummins, says: "The committee has full confidence in the integrity, intelligence and patriotism of the Supreme Court of the United States, but it is unwilling to repose in that court, or any court, the vast and undefined powers which it must exercise in the administration of the statutes under the rule which it has promulgated. It substitutes in the place of the unguided discretion of the courts, the Congress for whom the rule is invoked the court does not administer the law but makes the law. If it continues in force the Federal courts will so far as restraint of trade is concerned, make a common law for the United States just as the English courts have done."

The committee also proposes to create a new court, a legislative court, by which to measure the form of restraint of trade which we are familiar with which we can administer, we can have a government of law and become a government of men and not of a very few men and their appointed by the president."

The committee urges Congress to legislate laws which will quickly and possibly certain conditions upon which persons and corporations shall be permitted to engage in commerce.

"These conditions should be of a character that will tend to preserve reasonable competition," it adds, "or substantial competitive conditions, and to complete independence in both organization and conduct. They should be so clear that the business world can understand them and go confidently forward, guided by them."

The committee recommends that certain definite forms of combinations, agreements, contracts or pools now within the "rule of reason" be definitely mentioned in the laws as unlawful. It declares that such organization is necessary, not only to give the attorney general the ground upon which to proceed, but also to give business interests a standard by which they work.

A supplementary report probably will be made later by the committee reporting a definite form of a bill to preserve the desired "legislative tests and standards" to limit the scope of judicial discretion.

Separate views were filed by Senators Newland, Tillman, Pomerene, Gore and Lippitt.

Senator Newland said he agreed with the conclusions reached in the main report.

CUT THROAT WITH RAZOR

Wm. Cooper Was Temporarily Deranged

William Cooper, aged 29 years, of 17 Epping street is at St. John's hospital as a result of his attempting last night to commit suicide by cutting his throat with a razor, an act which is supposed to have been incited by the man's despondency. His chances for recovery were reported as excellent this morning by the authorities of the hospital who said that he was resting comfortably.

Cooper lives with his brother, Alfred at the address above. Last night he went to his room early and upon investigation made when he failed to return, he was found with two deep gashes in his throat and a razor beside him. The ambulance was summoned immediately and took him to St. John's hospital. It is believed the man was temporarily deranged as a result of despondency.

I Invite Suffering Women

There is every reason why women should not trust their delicate constitutions in the hands of unskilled persons. It requires a thorough medical education to appreciate and understand the delicate female organism. There is every reason why she should write or personally consult an experienced specialist.

As a powerful, invigorating tonic, "Favorite Prescription" imparts strength to the whole system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. For "run-down," debilitated women of all occupations is unequaled as a restorative tonic. As a soothing and strengthening nerve "Favorite Prescription" allays and subdues nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, and other distressing symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic diseases of the feminine organs. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is devised and put up by a physician of vast experience in the treatment of women's maladies. Its ingredients have the indorsement of leading physicians in all schools of practice.

The "Favorite Prescription" has been sold by dealers in medicine in its liquid form for over 40 years. Now it can also be obtained in the form of tablets—or send 50 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce for trial box.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorates the stomach, liver and bowels. One to three a dose. Easy to take as candy.

Send 31 one-cent stamps to pay cost of wrapping and mailing only on a free copy of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1608 pages, cloth-bound. Invalid's Hotel and Surgical Institute, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y.

"It Helped Me So Much."

Mrs. F. W. Mearns, of New York, Pa., writes: "Your Favorite Prescription has done me a wonderful lot of good. Seven years ago when our first child was born I was left miserable, I doctored with two physicians without any relief. I then wrote to one of the best doctors in Williamsport, Pa. and he said I must have an operation at once and that I should quit work. I had been so miserable I could not do it. I then began taking your Favorite Prescription and it helped me so much. I always suffered from our first child when I got along nicely. I shall never go through it again without your medicine. I will close by wishing you much success in the future."

ARE LIABLE TO PENAL SERVITUDE

Suffragists Accused of Setting
Fire to Buildings in the Public Gardens

LONDON, Feb. 27.—Militant suffragists connected with the setting on fire of buildings in public parks are liable to penal servitude for life. This was the announcement made today by Mr. Travers Humphreys, the public prosecutor, in asking the magistrate at the Kew police court to commit for trial Lillian Lenton and Joyce Locke, who were arrested on Feb. 20 for setting fire to the refreshment pavilion in the Kew botanical gardens.

At the hearing today only Miss Locke appeared. Miss Lenton having been released owing to ill health, after carrying out a hunger strike. Mr. Humphreys said the prison authorities and reported that she was certain to die unless she were let out of prison.

In spite of this the magistrate said that the procedure was an extraordinary one. Prisoners, he continued, sometimes were released from prison, but not from custody. He immediately issued a warrant for her re-arrest.

Miss Locke, who also had started a hunger strike while detained, was forcibly fed. She pleaded today that she was not fit to conduct her defense, but the case was proceeded with and she was committed for trial at the assizes. She was allowed in the sum of $500 on the undertaking of the accused that she would refrain from any agitation or militant acts pending her appearance before the jury.

A woman was arrested at Wimbledon last night with bags containing inflammable materials in her possession and whose intention it is believed was to burn down the pavilion on the tennis grounds, refused to give any information about herself when brought up in the police court today. She was remanded for further inquiry.

HOME FOR AM. RED CROSS

Building Will Cost $700,000—Bill Passed

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Provision for a home for the American Red Cross was made in the public buildings appropriation bill passed by the senate early today. The building would cost $700,000 of which the United States government would provide $400,000 and the Loyal Legion the remainder. The site would be here and the structure would be dedicated to the Loyal Legion of the Civil War. An amendment to the bill was adopted only after a bitter fight, in which southern senators insisted that the dedication should not be partisan but

BOSTON MAN KILLED

In a Street Row at Portsmouth

PORTSMOUTH, Feb. 27.—George Nagel of South Boston is dead here and James Berry of New York is held by the police. Nagel was connected with the 15th company of coast artillery at Fort Constitution, Portsmouth harbor, and Berry is attached to the naval hospital.

It is alleged that Berry assaulted Nagel on Fleet street late last night and that the latter's death resulted from his striking his head on the curb when knocked down by Berry. He died in the office of Hyslop's livery stable on Fleet street, where he was taken after the affair in the street.

He was arrested in a local hotel. He told the police he could recall having been concerned in some "trouble" last night, but declared he had no recollection of Nagel.

CHELMSFORD

Mr. Emilie Paigson on his return from New York has had shipped to Chelmsford about 35 head of cattle which are now at Moses Wilson's cow barn on the Lowell road.

Mr. Leon Parker, the milk man, who has been confined to his home on account of a strained knee is improving and will soon be able to resume his duties.

Superintendent of Highways David Higgins is having several of the poorest streets in town repaired. A section of South street is being filled in with gravel and Westford street opposite the common is also receiving attention.

Mr. Amida Arthur Noel of Robins hill, who departed recently for the country, is employed by the Central Lumber company, now rolling logs into a river to go to the saw mill. Mr. Noel will return next June.

The Chelmsford board of trade will hold a meeting this evening in the North Chelmsford town hall. The business which will be discussed is as follows: Collection of collections, consideration of articles to be inserted in the warrant for the annual town meeting.

HENRY W. HOOLE DEAD

Former Lowell Boy Died in Michigan

Henry W. Hoole, a Lowell boy, son of Henry Hoole, former city messenger, died in Saginaw, Mich., and the following is from a report of the death in the Daily News of that place:

Henry W. Hoole was born in Lowell, Mass., in very humble circumstances, though of excellent parentage, in 1885, and early in life showed the determination and conscientious effort, which with marked intelligence and ability characterized him throughout. Through his own unaided efforts, he supplemented the ordinary common school teaching he received with a thorough training in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, at Boston, from which he graduated with honors. While pursuing his studies in the Institute, he obtained employment, a great portion of his time being spent with Boston newspapers, where he made his mark.

He was graduated in 1905, and became associated with the Miller, Franklin Stevenson people, in efficiency engineering, in which he had specialized. He continued with this firm for about three and a half years, meeting with great success, and during which period he came in contact with the Larkin Rule company. Then he became the successful general manager for the Woodward Products association with headquarters at Indianapolis, and crowded a vast amount of experience into his continuance in that position. He succeeded in largely increasing the factory efficiency of the association, which has plants in various centers, and wrought successfully along the line of standardizing products. He made a mark, also by his great success in methods devised and carried out for saving waste in hickory, a wood very extensively used in the products of the association.

His work attracted attention from big institutions all over the country and the competition for his services was keen, all this being accomplished while he was yet under 30 years of age. The Larkin Rule Co., of Saginaw, succeeded in securing his services, and he entered the employ of that firm as factory manager, on Nov. 1, last, his work since that time giving the highest degree of satisfaction, and indicating that even bigger things were ahead of him.

Rev. T. E. Swan, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church, officiated at the funeral and the burial took place at Forest Lawn cemetery, being attended by the Larkin Rule employees in a body. The following associates of deceased in that concern were the pallbearers: S. B. Meier, H. F. Kraus, George Keating, F. C. Scherping, I. Groom, Jas. Elliott.

Mr. Hoole is survived by his widow and two small children. His father and mother and sister, Patricia, now live at West Allis, Wisconsin.

WIDOW OF CAPT. SCOTT

Arrived in Wellington N. Z., Today

WELLINGTON, N. Z., Feb. 27.—Lady Scott, widow of the Antarctic explorer, arrived here today on board the Aorangi, on which she had embarked for the purpose of coming to New Zealand to meet her husband on his expected return from the South pole.

Lady Scott heard of the terrible fate he had suffered while she was in mid-ocean off Fiji. As soon as she had recovered from the first shock she said: "I must be brave, as my husband would have wished me to be."

Her brother, Lieut. Bruce, and Commander Edward Evans of the British navy, who brought back the sad news from the Antarctic, met Lady Scott on the pier. She appears to be bearing up bravely under the awful blow.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

Opera House

There will be no matinee at the Opera House today as The Loneran Players give way for the appearance here tonight of "Milestones," but will resume their performances tomorrow afternoon presenting "The Virginian" for the remainder of the week, both afternoon and evening. Commencing next Monday and for the entire week the Loneran Players will offer a production of "The Gambler" by Charles Klein. "The Gambler" is a splendidly constructed and intensely interesting drama and is written in the author's best vein. The gambles of Mr. Klein's play are a group of bank directors. They have successfully established a chain of banks and seek to extend their operations. Their policy is expansion and they expand by breaking the banking laws. At the very moment when the president has secured the needed funds to straighten out the financial tangle, one of his partners, frightened by threats of a jail sentence, turns over to the prosecuting attorney certain notes that are sufficient evidence to send to prison the heads of the bank, including the young man's father, who is innocent of wrong doing. Mr. Klein, who is the author of "The Music Master," "The Lion and the Mouse," "The Third Degree," and other successful plays, has written a powerful message in this play, one that is so forceful and compelling that the play ran for over 200 consecutive nights in New York, as well as for extended periods in other cities.

"MILESTONES"

"Milestones," the most talked of play of the generation, interpreted by a remarkable company of distinguished English players will be presented at the Opera House tonight, direct from a notable run at the Tremont theatre, Boston, by Klaw & Erlanger, under the direction of Joseph Brooks. "Milestones" is by Arnold Bennett, author of "Changeling," "The Matador of the Five Towns," "How to Live on Twenty-four Hours a Day," and other novels and essays, and Edward Knoblauch, author of "Risqué."

Historically, "Milestones" is of unusual interest, for its three acts all take in the same room, the first in 1854, the second in 1885 and the third in 1912. As the play progresses we see the marked changes in dress, furniture, decoration, sentiments and manners. Several of the characters are carried along by the same players through youth, maturity and old age.

Keith's Theatre

Lovers of musical comedy can find something there will like in "The Antique Girl," being sung and danced at the Keith theatre this week. It is an original concoction all the way through and the cast of principals is more than ordinarily good. It includes George M. George, as the dealer in fake antiquities; Miss Dorothy Van Court, Miss Ruby Bailey and Earle B. Mountain. Other acts listed for the week are: Dooley & Parker, singers and talkers; Warren & Connolly, in a hodge-podge of fun and music; the musical Van Dykes, instrumentalists; Will & Kemp, hand-to-hand balancers; the aerial Larrus, in daring work; an unnamed grand opera soprano, and Ray Conington, ventriloquist. Seats for all performances may be obtained at the box office. Phone 28.

Merrimack Square Theatre

If you haven't seen the bill being given at the Merrimack Square theatre this week do so, for it's good. "What Happened in Holland," the title of the last piece being given by the Temple Players, is as good as the best, while it is surrounded by other vaudeville offerings of merit, pleasantly intermingled with a series of the latest and best photo-plays obtainable. These will be changed today and as usual will include among others the newest Pathe Weekly, a biograph and others. Performances are continuous from 1 to 10.30. The supper hour matinee are given especially for those who cannot attend the regular shows.

The Playhouse

That the Drama Players are giving genuine satisfaction this week in the presentation of the society drama, "Young Mrs. Winthrop," goes without saying. At every performance each and every member of the cast comes in for favorable recognition for their exceptional efforts in presenting their respective roles in a way that's many degrees above the average. Six more performances of the play are to be given and those who have not already witnessed it should avail themselves of the remaining opportunities. Secure your tickets in advance and assure yourself of the best seats. Next week the comedy drama, "The Marriage of Kitty" will be presented.

Theatre Vogue

Today the Theatre Vogue presents for the first time in Lowell "The Will of the People," an Edison drama of the political life of today. It deals with the crookedness of a large contractor and his attempt to compel an honest lawyer to accede to his demands for graft. "Art and Honor," a Lubin society drama, is well acted and staged amid most appropriate surroundings.

ESSEX TROOP WILL GO FROM NEW JERSEY TO WASHINGTON TO SERVE AS ESCORT FOR WILSON

NEWARK, N. J., Feb. 27.—Under similar capacity for President Taft, the Essex troop, which is to act as personal escort to President-elect Wilson at the inauguration ceremonies, will leave for Washington next Monday afternoon. The Essex troop will be at the Union station to escort him to the Hotel Skidmore, where he will spend the night of March 3 as the guest of his uncle, John Wilson, of Franklin, Pa. As personal escort the Newark company will have the place of honor in the inaugural parade. The Essex troop was organized twenty years ago by the late James A. Fleming. For several years it was an independent organization, and its membership was composed of young men of the first families of Newark and the Oranges. After it was recruited it applied for admission to the national guard and was mustered in as the first troop, national guard of New Jersey.

Hughes Alien Lands Bill

OLYMPIA, Wash., Feb. 27.—In accordance with the suggestion of Secretary of State Knox, who feared certain provisions of the bill might be considered unfriendly by China and Japan, the state senate yesterday continued the Hughes alien lands bill which previously had passed the house. The purpose of the bill was to amend the state constitution so that aliens other than Chinese and Japanese could acquire title to property in this state. Under the constitution only citizens may acquire property.

Lawrence Ordered to Abate Tax

BOSTON, Feb. 27.—The city of Lawrence today was ordered by the supreme court to abate the tax of $11,321 levied in 1903 on the Essex company, holders of certain water rights of that city. The court found that the assessed valuation of the property of the company was $650,333 in excess of a fair valuation.

TRIAL OF MRS. EMILY PANKHURST

Militant Suffragette Leader Arraigned on Charge of Inciting Bomb Explosion

EPSON, England, Feb. 27.—Mrs. Emily Pankhurst, the militant suffragette leader, was arraigned today on a charge of inciting persons to commit malicious damage to property. The court heard evidence that Mrs. Pankhurst had been seen at a meeting where a bomb was exploded. She was charged with inciting the persons to commit the explosion. The court heard evidence that Mrs. Pankhurst had been seen at a meeting where a bomb was exploded. She was charged with inciting the persons to commit the explosion.

Changes at City Hall

The office of the park department at city hall has been changed from the third to the second floor. The park department had its headquarters next to the office of the superintendent of schools and now the department will occupy the room used as a private office by George H. Brown, when he was commissioner of streets and highways. Mr. Whittier, park department superintendent, would have preferred to remain where he was, but the trustees decided to put Mr. Whittier down stairs and give the trustee officers the park department's quarters, as it is necessary that the trustee officers should have their office near the school committee's rooms. Hereafter the trustee officers occupied a long narrow room next to the school committee's meeting room and very often persons wanting to see the trustee officers were obliged to wait standing in the hall because of the crowded condition of the trustee officers' quarters. The furniture and fixtures taken from the office formerly occupied by Mr. Brown have been stored in the old council chamber committee room and the room to be vacated by the trustee officers will be used by the school committee for sub-committee meetings.

Riotous Scene in House

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—A riotous scene occurred in the house yesterday when during the consideration of the battleships bill, Rep. Murray of Massachusetts, standing on the speaker's rostrum, demanded recognition to make a parliamentary point of order against two members having the same views acting as tellers on a one-battle ship proposition.

Rep. Alexander of Missouri, presiding over the house, repeatedly ordered Rep. Murray back to the floor and finally by his direction, Mr. Murray was forcibly removed from the rostrum by the sergeant at arms. Mr. Murray fought against this removal and his coat was almost stripped off in taking him away. Mr. Murray's colleagues gathered around him quickly. Speaker Clark took the chair and order was restored.

After Speaker Clark took the chair Mr. Murray was recognized to make a speech of explanation during which he contended that he found authority for his action in a book he had read at the congressional library. Later Mr. Murray apologized to the house.

Exams. For Police Sergeants

Mr. James H. Carmichael, local representative of the state civil service commission announced yesterday that the examination for the appointment of two police sergeants which was scheduled to take place this morning has been postponed to Monday morning March 3, at half past nine in the city hall.

Dr. Sandler Returns to Fall River

Dr. Samuel Sandler, city physician of Fall River, has returned to his home in that city after a brief visit here as the guest of Mr. A. S. Goldman, Esq., of 42 Ware street. Dr. Sandler bears the distinction of being the first Jewish city physician appointed in Massachusetts and he is also chairman of the board of health at Fall River. He is a young man and a graduate of Tufts Medical college and has received much favorable comment and commendation from the press of his home city.

Concert at Normal School

A large number of friends and relatives of the members of the Glee club at the State normal school gathered together yesterday to listen to the annual concert given by the Glee club, assisted by Miss Wilhelmina Wright Calvert, soprano, of Boston, and the semi-chorus from the Bartlett school.

All numbers were splendidly given, especially those by Miss Calvert, who is one of America's leading concert directors. The concert was given under the direction of Mr. Albert Edmund Brown, head music teacher at the school.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Observed by Mr. and Mrs. Farnham. They Were Married Sixty-two Years Ago Yesterday

Mr. and Mrs. William I. Farnham of 80 Gates street, yesterday observed the 62nd anniversary of their marriage. The happy couple were showered with congratulations and were made the recipients of many beautiful bouquets. Farnham is 87 years of age and Farnham is 85. They are still in excellent health and their stories of early life and of the country they inhabit. Both can trace their lineage to the earliest settlers of New England, their ancestors being fighters, Revolutionary soldiers and leaders in the civil affairs of the town.

Celebrating their anniversary today were three of their children, Will M. Farnham, a teacher in thebury Latin school; Hon. Frederick Farnham, of the engineer's department; and Mrs. Mary A. Bartley of this city. Lovell E. Farnham, engineer of the Camden, N. J., was here last night, but was unable to remain under actual circumstances. A rolled around family dinner was a feature of the formal celebration.

UNITED IRISH LEAGUE
Arranges for Big Meeting on March 16

The committee of the United Irish league, which is arranging for the monster meeting on March 16, met last night and discussed the outlook.

It was decided to send out an appeal to the friends of the cause, in order that the sum of $500 may be raised before May 1. It was announced that the Irish party must conduct a continuous campaign in England, Ireland and Scotland, in order to prevent any change in sentiment that might jeopardize the Asquith ministry on which the fate of the home rule measure now depends.

At the committee meeting it was announced that the speaker would be P. J. O'Keefe, Esq., one of the most prominent lawyers in Chicago, a man who distinguished himself as a member of the vice commission of Chicago and an orator of well known ability.

The committee has secured a finely engraved souvenir to be given to those who contribute a dollar or more to the funds.

At the conclusion in Philadelphia on September, the local branch of the league pledged itself to raise $500 this year, and as funds are needed at the present time to conduct a continuous campaign throughout England, Scotland and Ireland, the present demand will undoubtedly be met in a very generous spirit.

The meeting of Sunday, March 11, will be free so that there will be nothing but the music of the night to draw from attending. Mr. James J. Flynn, the well known Boston baritone, who made such a hit in Irish songs when he appeared here two years ago, has consented to sing at this meeting, so that a rare treat is in store for those who attend. Several local singers will also appear in the concert feature, so that the meeting will undoubtedly be one of the largest held here for many a year.

DEADLOCK IN STRIKE

Of the Boston Garment Workers

BOSTON, Feb. 27.—A deadlock has been reported apparently in the men's clothing strike which was called last month ago. Of the five thousand garmentworkers who left their places of employment three thousand are still out according to authoritative figures. Practically all the small manufacturers have granted the strikers demands and have taken back the workers but the owners of the large establishments have been unable to reach an agreement with the strike leaders.

Most cities and small towns as well have their neglected neighborhoods. The latest and best series of the Survey is publishing on "satellite cities," by Graham Romeyn Taylor, points out that the towns across Mississippi from St. Louis are "outlets for the city, sharing the city's life of the larger city is concerned. But even one of these "satellite" towns, has in turn, its own forlorn outcast community—"Hungry Hollow" isolated from the main part of the city. Gradually, the neighborhood is becoming the largest breeding place of the largest and most numerous of the "garlands and Macedonians to be found in the United States, according to the investigations of the federal immigration commission. At one time there were about 100,000 of them, but the number diminished, and when 60,000 were back to the Balkan war last year, scarcely 1000 were left.

tically no sanitary supervision, and excessive overcrowding—as many as living at one time in 45 rooms, conditions of these immigrants peculiarly wretched and lacking in advantages America is supposed to afford. Furthermore, they are exploited by their countrymen who through "blackmailing" and "double dipping" sell them everything from glass of beer to a newspaper in their own language. Yet they live in cheapest way and save a large percentage of their wages. From a bank in London £10,000 was drawn in six weeks during the Balkan war. An American almost thinks him in a foreign country when he goes into Hungary. However, in the last part of May you will find every day a large number of immigrants, goods brought in from the north and woodland. On all sides you will hear singing and the music of the cornet, tina, while every saloon and country house overflows with all sorts of gaiety. It is almost impossible to find the occasion for it all these comparatively uneducated foreigners are living the most hilarious time—and some of them are getting uproariously drunk—in honor of the origin of Bulgarians. About the middle of June, St. Methodius and St. Cyril whose credit that literary labor stands during the Balkan war all such activity as dancing and gay music abandoned; national hymns and large descriptions of the soldier's life, bravery in death were mainly heard.

Manager Gray received word last night of the long looked for meeting of the schedule committee of the New England league, which will be held in the American house, Boston, tomorrow. With Duffy practically assured of moving his franchise to Portland, the committee can now go ahead and arrange a playing schedule without any difficulty. All the clubs will be represented at the meeting tomorrow.

George Allen, the former English 140 lb. runner and now the crack miller of the Powder Point school track team, has been protested for the B. A. A. meet Saturday. Allen is looked upon as the best miller in the country. The authorities in charge of the meet will allow him to compete. Lowell followers of the sport will remember watching this boy take the bands over the long route when he was running for Boston Eastern High. It is claimed that Allen is over the age limit for junior competition.

The Portland fans have organized the Portland Baseball Association. This organization will have as its chief function the promotion of a baseball park for Hugh Duffy's team and is incorporated for $10,000. The Maine town certainly wants to see some real baseball this year. Portland has turned out some of the country's most noted diamond stars. Harry Lord, Jack Combs and Bill Carrigan are all natives of that city.

Carroll Libbee, the crack little sprinter of the high school track team, has contracted the measles from some unknown source. Coupled with that the cold shower baths which he took after the regular practice last Monday brought on a bad chill and the boy has been confined to his bed since that time. Libbee was entered in the 40-yard dash at the big meet Saturday in Boston but will be unable to compete.

"KNUCKLES" CICOTTE ARE IN GOOD CONDITION

Tells of Difference in the White and Red Sox

Eddie Cicotte, dumpling pitcher, surprised to an interview recently. After he came out from under the influence of the anesthetic he remarked:

"There is all difference possible between the Boston Red Sox and Chicago Sox. The Boston club is made up of two men, Carrigan and Wagner. They are the only players who work in unison. The others work for personal glory. One thinks solely of his fielding percentage and still another of how many games he can win by his pitching."

"Chicago the team is a unit. When a game is in progress the Chicago players are on edge with suggestions. For instance, if a young pitcher is working, Walsh or another of the older heads will coach the youngster along. Between innings he will point out the weaknesses of individual batters and in other ways assist the result."

"You never hear anything like coaching on the Boston bench. If a pitcher is hit a little hard or if a fielder makes a blunder the other players criticize instead of slapping the fellow on the back or yelling words of encouragement."

Yet Boston won the pennant and Cicotte was not on hand when the melon was sliced.

Jack Doyle, once one of the members of the famous Baltimore team which won pennants in the National league in the nineties, has been engaged by Manager Callahan as a scout for next season.

Doyle has tried his hand at almost every angle of the game and has succeeded in only one department, the playing end. Since he quit the game as a player he has been a manager and umpire, but did not succeed. But his judgment of players is excellent, and Callahan expects him to dig up a lot of phenoms for him.

Joe Tinker is starting well in handling the Cincinnati club. His preliminaries are full of promise. He knows just what he wants and just about how the team will line up at the start of the season. Joe isn't blustering or making predictions. He realizes what he is up against, which is the hardest proposition in the National league, and he is studying to make good.

Tinker needs pitchers and perhaps one infielder, and there is a deal on which may remedy this. Also Tinker's new material looks rather promising. Some of the scorchers appear to think Tinker will have trouble with certain players on the Reds, but if he does the trouble will be on the other side.

It is said that Johnny Evers may decide to play Roger Bresnahan in center field. Bresnahan is a rather versatile player, and he has in former years put in some time in the outfield.

Of course he has slowed up some since then, but Evers, who is figuring on putting the strongest possible hitting team into the field, figures that Archer can do most of the catching and that room must be made for Bresnahan in order to get the benefit of his stick work.

Umpire Connolly speaks highly of two of the Chicago White Sox youngsters. "Ray Schalk," said the umpire, "looks to be the best backstop to look in the big league in years. He is a natural ball player, and it is a pleasure to watch him work. Horton, the young first baseman, also looks good to me."

Lange to Help Sox

Bill Lange, the Ty Cobb of the baseball nineties and former Chicago idol, is "coming back" not as a player or manager, but as coach. Extraordinary in instructing recruit and veteran White Sox athletes in the three points of base running during the ten day stay of Callahan's athletes at Paso Robles.

Wood Beats Flynn

AUGUSTA, Me., Feb. 27.—Ray Wood, west hammer and long as Eddie Flynn, won a night at city hall, often forcing Flynn to the ropes and causing him to cover at frequent intervals. Flynn took a good deal of punishment and sports here believe he would have gone out in two more rounds.

Freddie Welsh does not think much of himself as a drawing card. All he wants is $7500 for his go with Young Jack O'Brien, win, draw or lose. If Welsh persists in any foolishness, there are a couple of other boys who would draw practically as well and who would not expect the ring and expense Matt Wells or the Australian champion, McEgan, would be a good card.

The New Mexico house of representatives has reported favorably on an anti-riot bill for the state. If this bill goes through, and indications point that way, it will be a felony to hold boxing contests of any description in New Mexico.

Eddie Plank, the Athletics' twirler, is one of the oldest players in his league today. Plank is still pitching good ball and may last several years more. The Philadelphia pitcher has just passed his 35th year.

The recent court decision which was handed down over in New York which allowed that oral betting was no crime and that the proprietors could not be punished for these kind of wagers has started quite a bit of excitement among the turf followers. Already there is talk about opening up some of the race tracks in the spring. The Gotham racing associations will certainly open up if there is the least chance in the world of getting by.

The Swedish secretary of the Olympic committee has written to James E. Sullivan, the American secretary, thanking him for the courtesy of the American committee in sending back the prizes which Thorpe was requested to return. How about thanking the American for their return instead of a set of officials who sit down and study out an athlete's amateur standing by equations. To Thorpe is due all the credit for this unprecedented act!

Alger and Gallant Ready for Bout

The sports of this city are showing keen interest in the meeting between Gilbert Gallant and George Alger at the Lowell A. C. tomorrow night.

There has been so much heard and said about Gallant that the Lowell fans are really anxious to witness him in action. Against George Alger he will be forced to bring into play all the boxing he possesses, otherwise he will be in a losing end of decision. Alger is one of the headiest and craftiest boxers appearing in the American rings today.

After his contest with Battling Nelson the latter said that Alger was one of the best fighters he ever faced in his life. There are few of the good ones that Alger has failed to meet and the number of decisions against him are limited. At Worcester Alger defeated Young McDonough in a 10-round bout that was voted one of the best ever decided in that section of the country.

McDonough's victories over Jack Britton and other good men, stamped him as one of the best in the 135 pound class, but Alger, who has defeated these men, can not only win the fight, it will be the first time that the Cambridge boxer has ever appeared in Lowell and the fans are eagerly awaiting the time for his debut in the local ring. Alger has trained faithfully for the meeting with Gallant, having had the services of that veteran boxer, Dave Deshler, whose name is a bit backward in predicting a sure win for the Cambridge boxer. A New Bedford club wanted this match, but the Lowell A. C. matchmaker had option on Gallant's services, and was fortunate in the extreme to secure so worthy an opponent as Alger to meet him Friday night in a 12-round bout.

YACHT RACE ON COAST

San Francisco will be well represented in the international yacht race which is to be held on the coast in 1913, during the world's fair. Frank Stone, who is known to yachtsmen all over the country, states that he will have charge of the $200,000 sloop which yachtsmen here are to build.

The boat to be built is to be sloop rigged, on similar lines to the famous Shamrock and other boats of that class. The dimensions at present considered are as follows: Length over all, 120 feet; water line, 75 feet; beam, 22 feet; draft, 20 feet. These measurements are about 50 per cent. larger than the schooner yacht Seafarer, which is the largest yacht in the bay at the present time.

The Shamrock and other boats of this class that have been built for the famous America's cup races are a little larger than these dimensions and run about 90 feet along the water line.

The proposed yacht will be the largest sloop rigged yacht that ever has been built on the coast and never in the history of yachting in California has a yacht of this class ever sailed on Pacific waters.

Jackson Rounding Into Form

Arnold N. S. Jackson, the Oxford university student who startled the American athletic world by winning the 1500 meter run at the Stockholm Olympic games in 5 minutes 36.4 seconds, defeating Abel Kiviat, Norman Taber and John Paul Jones in the order named, is rounding into form for the 1913 season. In a recent set of intracollege games Jackson won the 440 yards, 550 yards and one mile races in easy fashion. His time for the three races were 440 yards, 52 seconds; 550 yards, 2 minutes, 9.4 seconds; mile, 5 minutes flat.

Champions Are Kids

The champions of the present time are "kids." They are Willie Ritchie, lightweight champion, twenty-two years; Luther McCarty, heavyweight champion, twenty years; Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champion, twenty-three years; Johnny Condon, bantamweight champion, held the title before he was of age.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Negotiations are pending for an international contest of 1,500 points at 18.2 ball line billiards between William F. Hoppe, the world's champion, and Francis Cassignol, conceded to be the best billiardist in France. If the game should be arranged it will take place early in April in Paris, for which city Hoppe will come in a few days after his match with Orlando Morningstar for the 181 championship. The Morningstar match will be decided at Pittsburgh on March 13.

Classical played in the tournament at New York in November, 1909, which Calvin Deconcorst won. Cassignol was artistic in an extreme, but affected delivery and precision to an extent that resulted in many failures on simple shots. When in good stroke his execution was fascinating. He was not, however, a reliable contestant. For the last three years Cassignol has been displaying phenomenal skill in a Parisian academy, where he is employed. On one occasion he ran more than 500 at 18.2.

Two Pardons Granted

Arthur Deconcorst of Haverhill and Joseph A. Leo of East Boston the Fortunate Men

BOSTON, Feb. 27.—Pardons were granted yesterday to Arthur Deconcorst of Haverhill, who on May 19, 1908, was sentenced to serve from eight to 10 years in state prison for assault with intent to commit murder, and to Joseph A. Leo of East Boston, sentenced on March 4, 1912, to two years in the house of correction for attempted larceny.

In the case of Deconcorst, the pardon was petitioned for by his wife, upon whom the assault was attempted, but who was not injured in any way, and also by his mother, who is now in the city hospital.

Leo was released from the state prison on March 12, 1912, after serving a term of 18 months for attempted larceny. He was released from the state prison on March 12, 1912, after serving a term of 18 months for attempted larceny. McMAHON CLAN OF LOWELL VS. McCLUSKEYS OF LAWRENCE IN BOWLING TOURNEY ON LOCAL ALLEYS

The above photograph includes the members of two bowling teams composed entirely of the brothers of the respective families. The McMahon brothers, seven in number, and the father, as well as the McCluskey brothers of Lawrence, all appear. The unique idea of having a matched interfamily game was first conceived by the Lowell boys and they straightway challenged any team of like composition in New England.

The Lawrence family accepted the challenge and the first game was rolled off with six-man teams last Saturday night. The local team lost, defeated in this contest by the very narrow margin of four pins. This is the first of a three-game series. The second game will be rolled on April 19 and the final match of the series on May 26. Although better in their initial contest, the McMahon brothers feel certain that the completion of the third game will mean a victory for the Lowell team.

The bowlers of the series will provide a banquet for the members of both families at some hotel in Lawrence or Lowell, and this fact lends additional spice to all of their matches. A large crowd of friends always attend the contests between these teams and good natured fun and good fellowship is the passport.

Victims of Big Fire Dead

BOSTON, Feb. 27.—Michael C. Sullivan, one of the Barnstable veterans who fought the great conflagration that swept the business section of Boston in 1872, has died at the City hospital morgue. Efforts are being made by his friends to see that he receives a burial that befits the veteran of scores of big Boston fires.

His only surviving relative is an only daughter, who is unable to secure burial for the veteran where he always thought he would finally rest—with his former comrades in Bremen's lot in Forest Hills cemetery. Unless aid from kindly natured persons is volunteered Mr. Sullivan's remains will be buried by the city.

Pleasant Signs With Lynn

Manager Pat Flaherty, the new leader of the Lynn baseball club of the New England league, will receive with his day's mail at his Chicago home today the signed contract of Frank "Jeff" Fisher of 162 Greenfield street, Dorchester, who pitched for Lowell last season.

Conference Between Mr. Irish, principal of the Lowell high school, and Mr. James Hurn, headmaster of the high school in Lawrence, is looked for in the near future. The object of this meeting will be the settling for good and all of the status of the two schools with regard to the athletic relations.

There are three big schools in the so-called Merrimack valley, the high schools of Lawrence, Haverhill and Lowell. A few years ago a league was formed among these three schools, but relations were broken off between two of the schools, so the whole scheme was disrupted. Since that time athletic relations have been carried on between them in a rather hit or miss fashion and no real definite agreement has been reached.

Football is the sport where more money is made by the school teams than other branches of sport. The big game where practically all the money of the entire season is made, however, comes on Thanksgiving day, when the holiday crowd turns out in full strength no matter what the weather may be. For the past several years Lawrence and Lowell as well as Lawrence and Haverhill have not been on speaking terms, to put it figuratively. So that the only game that was played between the three schools was that played between Lowell and Haverhill.

Lowell has always been the goat in the previous arrangement of games, as Lawrence and Haverhill invariably played their annual game on Thanksgiving day. Therefore, when negotiations were broken off between Lowell and Lawrence Mr. Irish tried to arrange the annual game for the holiday date, but the head of athletics at Haverhill High could not see the wisdom of such a move, so the proposition fell through.

Now, however, athletic relations have been resumed between Lowell and Lawrence, and negotiations are under way between the heads of athletics in the two schools. If this scheme goes through with an agreement for a football game to be played on Thanksgiving day between Lawrence High and Lowell High, both teams will undoubtedly find that the best athletic arrangement possible has been inaugurated.

Football coaches complain that the sport ruins many promising young players. If they had their way they would pass a law prohibiting any newspaper from boosting a youngster but the coaches are barking up the wrong tree.

When John Delahanty, the former second baseman of the Detroit Tigers, was asked if he thought the use of the spitball spoiled many young pitchers he said:

"It isn't the splitter that spoils them. If they had any brains they wouldn't spit, and since they haven't any brains they wouldn't make good anyway."

The same thing holds good of the young "greater than Heston," who gains undue prominence by carrying the scrubs' ball fifty yards for a touchdown through the whole variety of his skill in the elastic sort, what the papers say of him is of no account.

It is pale besides what his friends at college tell him, and their words are but a faint glow in the light of what he thinks of himself. If he is a fool he figures that he is a hero. He is a hero and Tom Shevlin knows how his own he had sense he rolled into one, he blocked a tackler and how the varsity quarterback slipped as he lunged for him.

If he goes down under a torrent of ammunition it makes no difference. As Delahanty says, "He hasn't enough sense to make good anyhow."

Catchers do not seem to last long these days. After four or five years of steady work the strain seems to tell on them, and there are instances where a catcher is at his best after that period. Three years ago Charley Street and Charley Schmidt of the Detroit team were a pair of as good catchers as could be found, yet both have dropped out of fast company and in fact are finding it a difficult matter to hold their places in the minor leagues. Many of the old catchers have gone down with them and only a few are hanging onto the big league jobs. Billy Sullivan is one of them, but Sullivan is working only seldom, and his days in the majors, too, are numbered.

Patrick brothers of Vancouver have an offer from Los Angeles to bring a couple of hockey teams there next spring and give an exhibition of how the game should be played. They are also negotiating with the owners of rinks in Melbourne and Sydney, Australia. The trip would occupy about six or seven weeks, several exhibitions being given in each city.

WORCESTER, Feb. 27.—Judge Forbes issued a decree in probate court yesterday ordering John Cannon of Clinton to quit the boarding house kept by his wife at 12 High street and to leave her alone. The order followed a hearing on a petition from Mrs. Cannon for separate support.

According to the story told by Mrs. Cannon, her husband, who is a carpenter and he set around all day, not at home, but in saloons. She told the court he was in the habit of coming home and making trouble among her boarders. She said she could set along better without him and that this is the second time she had to appeal to the court.

THE ATHLETIC RELATIONS Of Lowell and Lawrence to be Settled

McMahon Clan of Lowell vs. McCluskeys of Lawrence in Bowling Tourney on Local Alleys

Change in Fine Form Another Quiet Night for 1913 Season

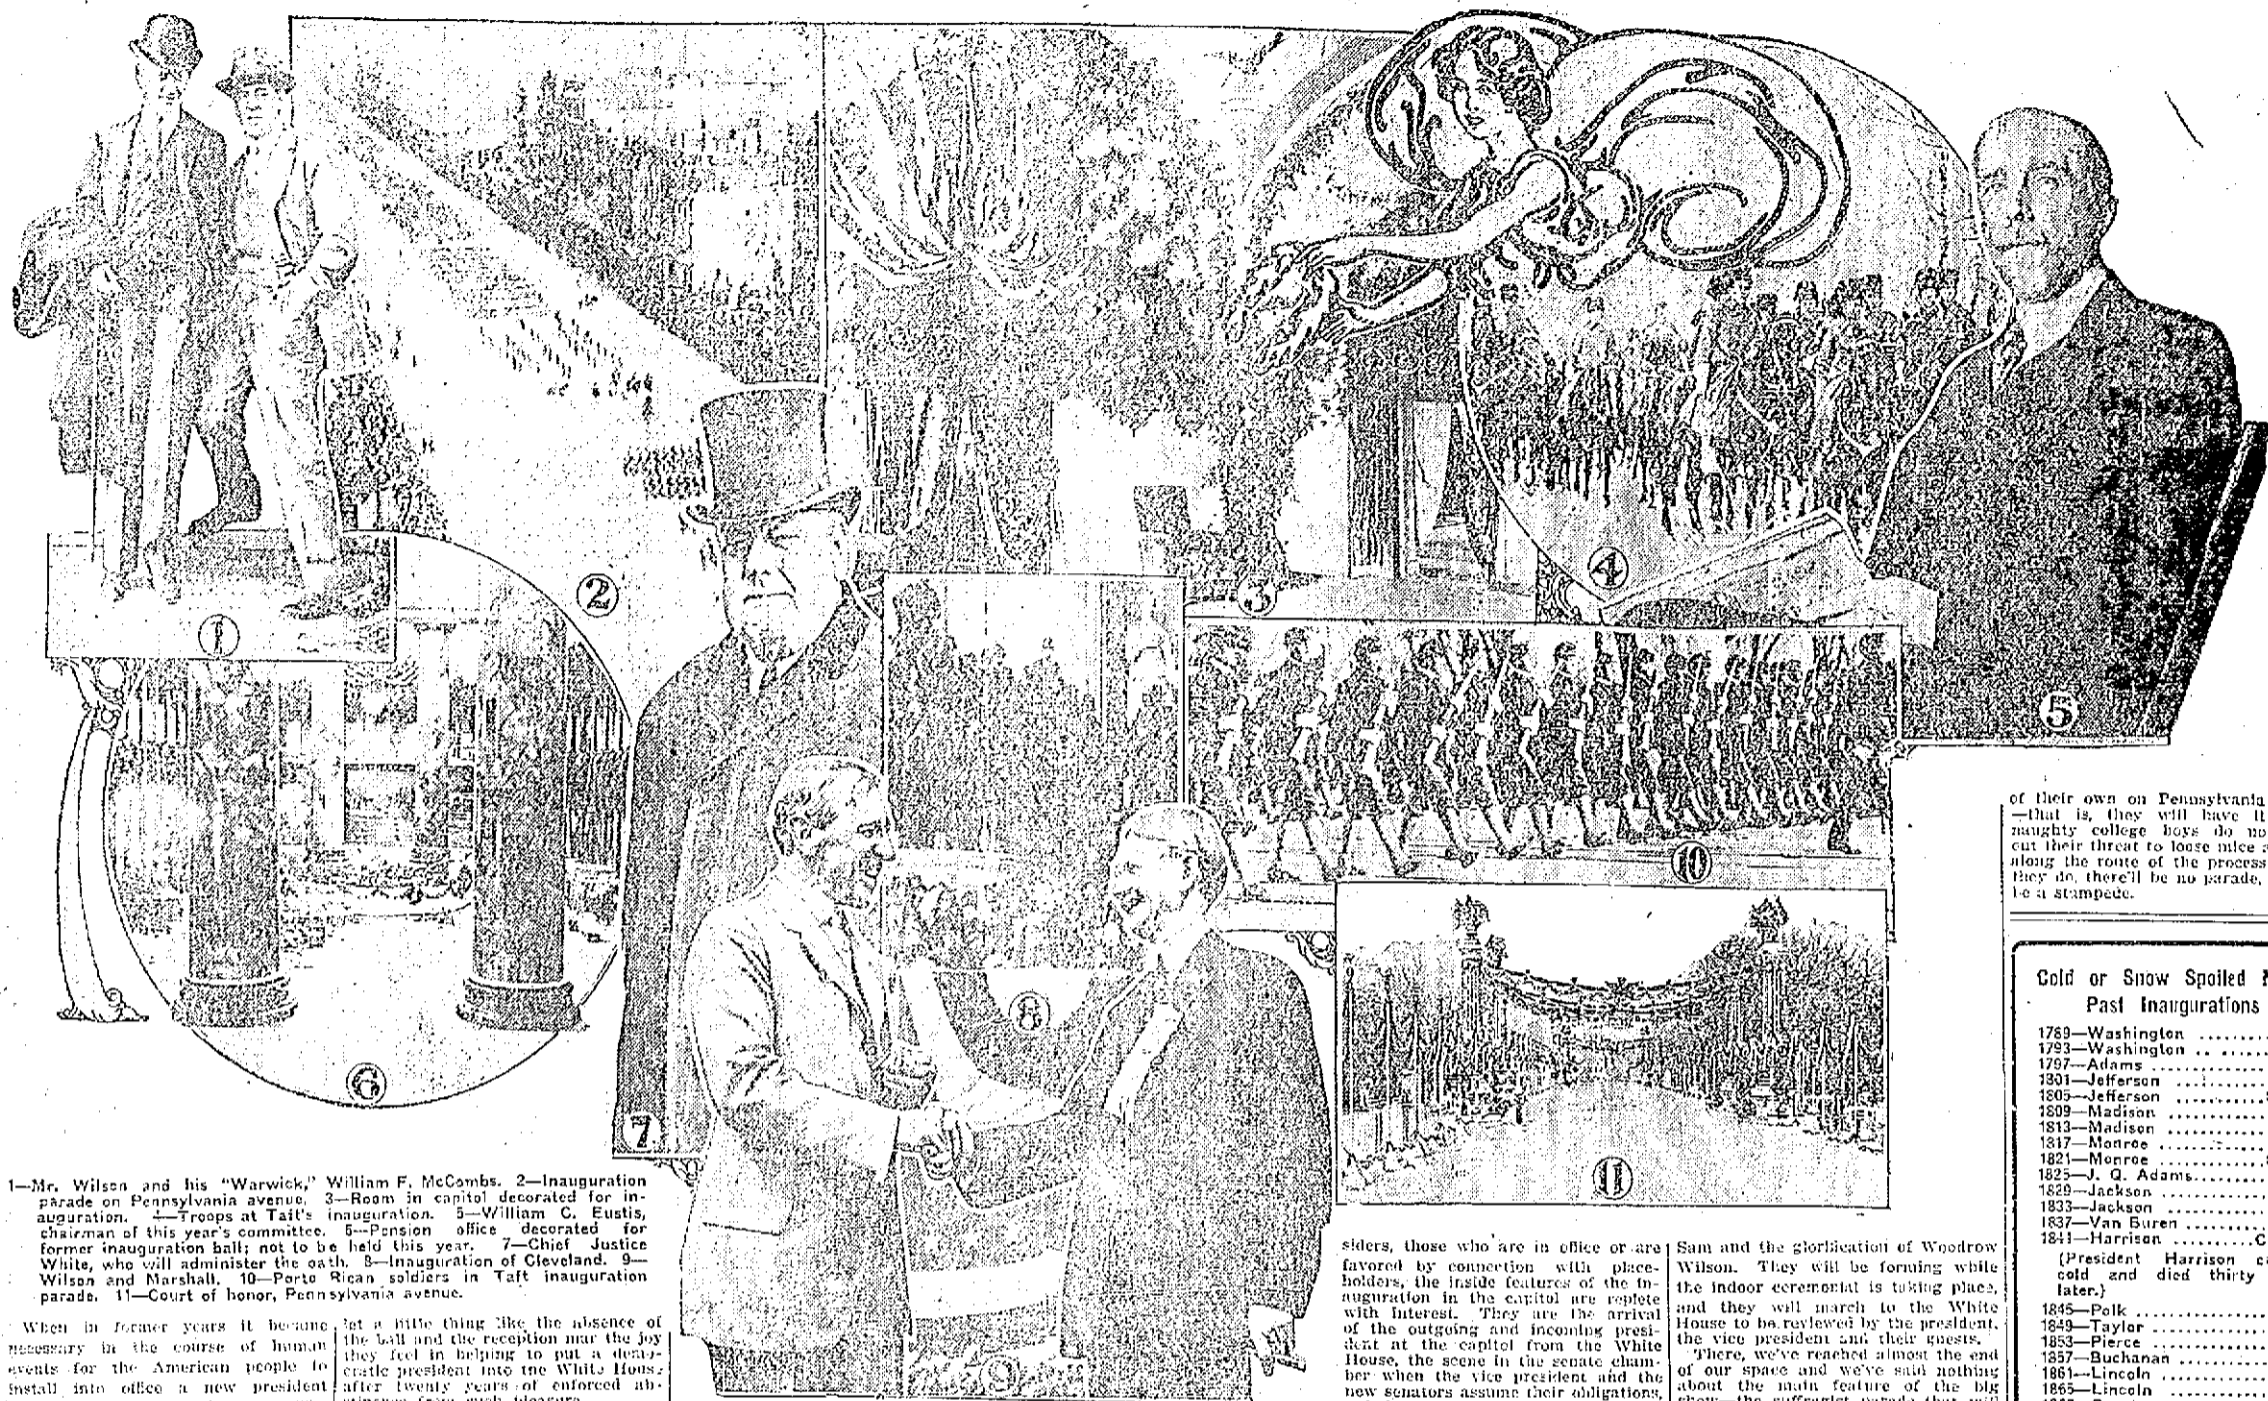

Peerless Leader Ready The Bowlers Had Other "Matches"

One glance at Frank Chance is convincing that the former leader of the Cubs is again in perfect health. In fact, Chance never looked better. He is a player in the prime of his life, and there is no doubt that he can play ball. Chance is sure to be a success in New York regardless of the showing his team may make in the coming campaign. It will not take him long to realize what is necessary to assure his success. Just as soon as he makes it plain to the powers that be that he will not tolerate interference he will have started on the right path. There have been too many tale carriers connected with the New York management. A system of espionage has been used on former managers which has proved a serious handicap. Chance will not stand for that sort of treatment, and he will have nerve enough to declare himself.

It is, of course, absurd to predict a high position in the race for Chance's team the coming season, though there is no doubt that his presence will strengthen it considerably. But even Chance, who is regarded as one of the wisest men in baseball, cannot perform miracles, and he must be given time to build up his aggregation.

While it is true that McGraw will try out a lot of young players for both the in and out field, it would not be at all surprising if the Giants' lineup when the season opens is just as it was during the world's series last fall. When a team has won two pennants in a row it is not an easy matter for a manager to convince himself that he should make changes in his lineup. Though the Giants have not been successful in either of the recent world's series, the team has done remarkably well in its own league. It has surely been a winning combination, and though McGraw

Elaborate Plans Being Made in Washington for the Inauguration of Woodrow Wilson as President of the United States--Interesting Facts of Past Inaugurals

1—Mr. Wilson and his "Warwick," William F. McCombs. 2—Inauguration parade on Pennsylvania avenue. 3—Room in the White House decorated for inauguration. 4—Troops at Taft's inauguration. 5—William C. Eustis, chairman of this year's committee, in the White House. 6—Inauguration office decorated for Wilson. 7—Chief Justice White, who will administer the oath. 8—Inauguration of Cleveland. 9—Wilson and Marshall. 10—Porto Rican soldiers in Taft's inauguration parade. 11—Court of honor, Pennsylvania avenue.

When in former years it became necessary in the course of human events for the American people to install into office a new president, the keynote of the occasion was: "Fun with the dance." Let joy be unconfined. This year it's different. They have performed a surgical operation on the inauguration, with Dr. Wilson at the butt end of the scalpel, and have excised the dance. When the simple ceremonies of the inauguration are completed the visitors will be told: "Back to your homes. There'll be no dance tonight."

But don't hurry away yet with the idea that there'll be no inauguration worth speaking of, that Washington will wear its worst aspect on March 4, 1913. It won't. The cutting out of the inauguration and the reception by the new president and his family will diminish the picturesque features of the inauguration, but it won't kill the ceremony by any means.

Pennsylvania avenue still stretches its mile and a quarter long from the capitol to the White House, affording one of the finest streets in the world to march on, and unless the weather is very severe indeed the broad plaza in front of the east entrance to the capitol will be thronged to hear Woodrow Wilson take the oath and deliver his inaugural address. Our democratic brethren and sisters are not going to let a little thing like the absence of the ball and the reception mar the joy they feel in helping to put a democratic president into the White House after twenty years of enforced abstinence from such pleasure.

The Inaugural Oath
If it isn't sacrilegious to say so, the donkey will bray very loudly when he sees Woodrow Wilson mount the stand, bow his head in reverence before the Bible held in the hand of Chief Justice White, and repeat the solemn words of the inaugural oath: "I do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States and will to the best of my ability preserve, protect and defend the constitution of the United States." If Mr. Wilson likes, he may substitute the word "affirm" for the word "swear." The people of the United States hold that if a man is big enough to be elected to the high and mighty office of president of the world's biggest republic he's good enough to take office without sweating out of the forehead. That is due to the fact that the vice president takes the oath first. You see, presidents come and go, but the United States senate goes on forever, being a continuing body, unlike the house of representatives. So there must be someone to administer the oath of office to the incoming senators, who take their seats on March 4.

Naturally the man to administer the oath is the vice president of the United States, who is to preside over the session. So before proceeding to the real business of the day they swear in the new vice president. Whether he would become president if the new president died before taking his oath is a theoretical question that may be left to those interested in such matters. Absit omen, as the Romans said—it's hope it never happens.

The inaugural ball and reception will be eliminated this year at the express wish of Mr. Wilson, who objected to the expense of closing up for two weeks the pension office, the only building in Washington with a even hall big enough to house the dancers. The cost of the inaugural ball to the government has been estimated as high as $100,000, and Mr. Wilson insisted that it was a needless expenditure.

The inaugural reception at the White House, therefore, deemed also an indispensable feature of inauguration evening, has been abandoned on the ground that the president and his family, wearied by a day of excitement and strain, should not be required to stand in line and receive thousands of visitors.

Some Ceremonial Features

That leaves, as has been said, the big part, the taking of the oath and the delivery of the inaugural address as the main features of the show for the multitude. Of course for the insiders, those who are in office or are favored by connection with place-holders, the inside features of the inauguration in the capitol are replete with interest. They are the arrival of the outgoing and incoming president at the capitol from the White House, the scene in the senate chamber when the vice president and the new senators assume their obligations, and the procession through the rotunda under the wonderful dome of the capitol to the east portico where the ceremonies are concluded by the delivery of the address by the president.

Of course there is a vast deal of ceremonial and red tape and formality, such as the entry into the senate chamber of the dignified, stately members of the supreme court, the arrival of the diplomatic corps in brilliant, full court dress and the marshaling of the procession of officials by the marshal of the United States supreme court and the marshal of the District of Columbia. These are observances that have come down to the present generation of Americans from the days of Washington and Adams and that must be followed now lest the man who remembers the inauguration of Buchanan be shocked.

It's a toss up whether the parade will be a success. It all depends on the weather. It's mighty hard to get enthusiasm when one is chilled through from long waiting in the stand on Pennsylvania avenue in case the sun averts his face from the inauguration of a president. Who does not remember March 4, 1909, when every variety of execrable weather completely spoiled the outdoor features of President Taft's inauguration? But if it should prove one of the bright, crisp, sunny March days with which Washington is blessed sometimes, thousands of soldiers, sailors, cadets, midshipmen, millionaires and civilians will march up Pennsylvania avenue for the honor of Uncle

Sam and the glorification of Woodrow Wilson. They will be forming while the indoor ceremonies are taking place, and they will march to the White House to be reviewed by the president, the vice president and their guests.

There, we've reached almost the end of our space and we've said nothing about the main feature of the big show—the suffragist parade that will take place on March 3, provided there is enough of a suffragist to smile then. But, of course, all the world knows already that on the day before inauguration day the women who want to vote will have a parade.

of their own on Pennsylvania avenue—that is, they will have it if the naughty college boys do not carry out their threat to loose mice and rats along the route of the procession. If they do, there'll be no parade. There'll be a stampede.

Association Takes Up Social Work

HELPING FAMILIES THROUGH OTHER AGENCIES

Annual Meeting Held in Boston Yesterday Afternoon—Nurses Must Teach Better Methods of Living

BOSTON, Feb. 27.—A wide range of activity in charitable and philanthropic work was described in reports at the 27th annual meeting of the Instructive District Nursing association, held at the Vendome at 3:29 yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Katherine B. Codman, the president, reported the association has 70 nurses working. It has spent about $22,000 for current expenses during the past year and will need $25,000 for the year to come.

A year ago, said Mrs. Codman, the association faced a deficit of $4,000 and had committed itself to the further expenditure of $2,000. The special endowment fund, started at the 25th anniversary, has reached $57,600 and was sufficient to meet the extra expense. Enough money has been raised to cover all expenses for the year and return to the general fund $12,000. "With the exception of the director's salary, we have spent less than we did the year before," she says. "We have brought the two big branches of our work together," she continued, "the work of the staff nurses and that of the students. We have established branch stations in seven centers with head nurses in each. We have appreciated and have undertaken to shoulder our responsibility toward the social condition of each family we visit, which involves more time spent by the nurses."

Memorial to Miss Cary
The association has joined with Simmons college in establishing an eight-months' course for nurses. Scholarships are given to four nurses who live in the home free of charge. There has been an increase of 49 in the number of patients cared for.

"We have one committee," says Mrs. Codman, "which is ever appealed, that always stands with hands wide open, begging for old cotton and linen and often for infants' clothing, sheets and pillow cases, women's night gowns, etc., but always old cotton and linen." The gift of $500 by Miss Kimball, in memory of her nephew, Francis Cummings, was particularly appreciated. King's chapel, the Arlington Street church and the Women's Society of Temple Israel, are especially thanked. Mrs. Codman pays a tribute to Miss Anne P. Cary, first vice president of the association, another of whose philanthropies was the Massachusetts infant asylum. As a memorial to her the committee devoted the fund of $1,175 contributed by Miss Cary's friends to pre-natal nursing and the income

Bringing Hope to the Disheartened

Miss Jessie S. Lelachuer, head of the educational department, in her report says:

By teaching better standards and methods of living and by encouraging struggling, disheartened people, by which we can estimate what has been done in the past by individual district nurses toward the prevention of disease and dependency. The nurse must learn what other people or agencies stand ready to give and how she can best connect her with them.

Miss Mary Beard, director, said:

"Preventive nursing is receiving more consideration than ever. We do not feel that thorough work has been done if we leave a family cured of the illness only and still living under unsanitary or insanitary conditions sure to produce illness again in a little while. To meet these demands upon us trained observation is a necessary qualification of the nurse of today."

The election of officers resulted as follows:

Mrs. Katherine B. Codman, president; Gertrude W. Peabody and Emily G. Denny, vice presidents; Ellen Hale, secretary; Frances L. Adams, Fannie Bartlett, Mary E. Hatchelder, Rosamond Bradley, Ellen Bullard, Georgiana J. Cary, Elizabeth F. Corder, Alice De Ford, Alice DeNormande, Cornelia P. DePaul, Sally H. Ehrlich, Isabel McCloud, Grandin, Mary L. Hall, Bertha L. R. Lucas, Elizabeth O. Monks, Marlain P. Morley, Susanah R. Norcross, Margaret C. Osmond, Mary Pamela, Rose Ritchie, Evelyn R. Thayer, Anita S. Ward, Anna S. Weld, managers; Ingersoll Rowditch, treasurer.

After the business session there was an address by Dr. Milton J. Rosenau, professor of preventive medicine and hygiene of the Harvard Medical school.

ON FOREIGN DIVORCES

Important Decision by Supreme Court

BOSTON, Feb. 27.—A decision of great importance to applicants for divorces who go to other states and there seek a legal separation has been sent down by the supreme judicial court.

In effect, the supreme court rules that a person who goes to another state, even with her husband, separates from him there and later seeks a divorce and alimony while he still lives in this state and does not appear at the trial or authorize anyone to appear for him, is not legally divorced, according to the laws of this commonwealth.

The case was that of Dr. Luther O. Martin, formerly of Durham, who is declared to be entitled to recover mortgage, deeds, notes and bank shares which his wife, Viola F. Martin, claimed as alimony and as a gift. The case was first heard by a master, who ruled that Mrs. Martin's Colorado divorce was invalid and ineffective and that the Colorado court had no jurisdiction over Dr. Martin.

The personal property which he recovers was in his wife's name but he claimed ownership. It amounts to several thousand dollars.

Dr. Martin went to Colorado in 1895 with his wife and there they separated. She remained there and he returned to Springfield. After he had gone she instituted divorce proceedings and was awarded alimony which included most of the securities of the case.

The master found that the Colorado court had no jurisdiction over him or his personal property and could not award the same as alimony. The master also found that when Martin went to Colorado he left the key and combination of the safe in Springfield with his mother-in-law, Mrs. Nathan H. Adams, and that she took the papers without authority and sent them to her daughter.

The court says that the master's findings are largely of fact and their correctness is not a means of determining, but on questions of law it finds he committed no error, and sustains the master's report which is in favor of Dr. Martin.

CHARLES H. RICHARDSON LAID ON THE TABLE

Funeral of Late County Commissioner Senate Acts on Lowell's Bill for Exclusion

The remains of Charles H. Richardson, the late county commissioner, were laid at rest in the Edison cemetery yesterday afternoon. The funeral which was largely attended took place from the home, 156 Methuen street.

Service was held at the First Unitarian church of which deceased was a constant attendant, and was conducted by Rev. Clarence R. Williams, and Rev. Caleb E. Fisher, D. D., pastor of the First Universalist church. Appropriate hymns were sung by Mrs. J. H. Coughlin of Clinton, Mr. Arthur C. Spalding presiding at the organ. The following organizations, of which deceased was a member, were represented by delegations: Pen-tucket lodge, A. F. and A. M.; Mount Herch Royal Arch chapter, Alpha chapter and Phi Gamma commandery. Among those attending the funeral were District Attorney John J. Higgins; Chairman Levi Gould and Chester B. Williams of the Middlesex county commission; Joseph O. Hayden, treasurer of Middlesex county; John R. Fairbank, sheriff of Middlesex county and City Commissioners Lawrence Cummings and James E. Donnelly. The funeral was held at 2 o'clock. The deceased was George E. Ames, William D. Brown, Frederick G. Coker, Frank C. Kendall, William R. Means, George F. Morgan, Edward J. Noyes and John Riddell. The burial was in the family lot in the Edison cemetery. The funeral arrangements were in charge of Chas. A. Eveleth, keeper of the Middlesex county jail, under the direction of Undertaker George W. Healey.

POLICE SYSTEMS ABROAD

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., believes European Methods Can Be Utilized in New York.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—If an attempt is made to reorganize the New York police department through legislation, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., believes that the experiences of European cities should be utilized in framing such laws.

In a statement which he issued yesterday on behalf of the Bureau of Social Hygiene, he asks that whatever remedial measures are taken now be of a tentative nature pending the publication by the bureau of the results of its investigations.

THE WOMEN ON DECK

Women Suffrage Discussion the Attraction

Women filled the biggest committee room at the State House yesterday, vouching approval and disapproving three petitions for submission to a referendum vote by the people of the state on an amendment eliminating the word "male" from the qualification of voters.

Socialists were first given 15 minutes to present arguments favoring their petition. By agreement, Dr. Harriet L. Clark said the party has always approved woman suffrage, and declared that the seriousness of disfranchising part of the race is now becoming acute.

Squire E. Putney of Somerville declared that woman suffrage will not force voting upon any one, but that "the best women will vote."

Declaring that it is a question of humanity, not taxation or property rights, Warren Carpenter pointed out that women are constantly becoming more vitally interested in public affairs.

Asserting that he has voted in Massachusetts 37 years and has always been a woman suffrage, ex-Congressman Samuel L. Powers of Seaton predicted that the voters of Massachusetts will adopt the amendment. If it is placed before them.

He pointed out that in England the "Votes for Women" question has passed from an agitation to a revolution. "The question is now an agitation," he added, "but it will become a revolution here also if equal suffrage is not granted."

Ex-Speaker Joseph Walker declared that the people are not interested in the opinion of legislators, but wish to express their own judgment. He said there is no good reason why these reasoning woman suffrage should be complicated to stand the trouble and expense of a state-wide campaign on merely a "straw" vote, when an expression of public sentiment, even though unfavorable, would not result in much progress.

The economic necessity of "Votes for Women" was pointed out by Mrs. L. M. Clark (Josephine Preston Peabody), the author.

Leah D. Brandeis told how he had changed his opinion of equal suffrage and now favored it. When he first voted 20 years ago he said he did not approve of woman suffrage. "In voting to better the community in which I live," he added, "I have come to believe that success in our experiment of democracy can be attained only through perfect democracy, and that women cannot be relieved of responsibility at the polls."

After Miss Marion Ruth Kelley and Prof. Albert Bushnell Hart had read woman suffrage, telegrams were read transmitted directly from a tuberculous fowl to healthy ones, but it is undoubtedly more frequently spread through the foodstuffs which are obtained from the droppings of the tuberculous cattle or hogs. The droppings of the diseased birds contain the germs which serve as a means of disseminating the disease through the entire flock.

Some of the outbreaks have been brought to notice through the finding of this disease among cattle and hogs, by means of the tuberculin test. The general appearance of the fowls received at this laboratory for diagnosis and experimental purposes, has not been such as would lead one to suspect that they were sick with tuberculosis or any other disease. In one instance one of the fowls had a very pale comb and was extremely thin, a condition which has been popularly termed "going light" by poultry raisers. The disease develops slowly among

CHRONIC DISEASES

SUCCESSFULLY TREATED BY MECHANO THERAPY

If you are suffering from a disease that refuses to yield to other methods of treatment. If you are becoming despondent and discouraged, you should investigate my method of treating diseased conditions. I will help you I will tell you so. It costs you nothing to talk it over with me and places you under no obligation to take the treatment. Sick and discouraged men and women are being made well every day by this treatment. fowls as well as in other animals, and after they are noticed to be ill, they linger for months before they die. Because of the slowness of the disease, and lack of interest and curiosity concerning it, this disease has probably been allowed to go unrecognized by a number of poultry raisers.

The chief bodily alteration, arising from tuberculosis is a small, usually raised spot, varying in size and ranging from a white to a yellowish white in color. This constitutes what is known as a tubercle. The tubercle is soft at first, and of a cheese-like consistency, later it becomes hard and gritty. This can be determined by cutting them with a knife.

In the chicken the liver is the chief organ selected as the point of attack. The liver becomes enlarged and covered with small spots or tubercles, which may be soft or calcified (gritty) depending upon the stage of the disease. At times the intestines may be covered with tubercles and they may also be found in the sheathlike lungs or "hairs" are rarely affected.

In order to prevent this disease it becomes necessary to provide sanitary surroundings. The hen house or brooder should be well ventilated and should have plenty of sunshine. The manure should not be allowed to accumulate in quantity. The interior of the house should be whitewashed twice a year. The drinking jars should be cleaned by boiling and the feeding places should be cleaned regularly.

When an outbreak appears the healthy birds should be removed, if possible, into new quarters, the sick ones remaining in the old quarters. If this is not possible, then the sick fowls should be separated from the healthy ones and the house should be thoroughly disinfected. Tuberculous chicken droppings should not be fed to swine as the latter may contract the disease from the carcasses. Eggs from tuberculous fowls should be considered as unsafe for food and should not be used unless thoroughly cooked. If tuberculous fowls are placed on the market they should be sold subject to inspection.

AUTO BANDITS GUILTY

DORR MAY HEAR HIS FATE TODAY VERDICTS AGAINST 18 MEMBERS OF HEAD OF MATTEAWAN RESIGNS

Trial of Accused Murderer Nearly Ended—Arguments Closed This Afternoon

SALEM, Feb. 27.—When William A. Dorr came to court today to hear the arguments for and against his conviction on the charge of murdering George E. Marsh of Lynn, he appeared much refreshed from his night's rest. During his description yesterday of the shooting of Marsh, which he claims was done in self defense, the defendant showed the effects of his recent attack of tonsillitis. This morning he walked boldly to his seat in the prisoners' cage and immediately entered into an animated conference with his attorneys. District Attorney Atwell, who is conducting the case for the commonwealth, had announced that he had two witnesses to call in rebuttal before Attorney Neil Barney began his argument for his defense.

Three members of the Lynn police force testified in rebuttal that there were no blood stains in the automobile, but there was blood on the ground where Marsh's body was found.

Dorr's testimony that he rode about for some time with the body of Marsh propped up beside him in the auto, was attacked by the prosecution through testimony of Medical Examiner J. Ed. Pinkham of Lynn, who said that all rigidity left the neck immediately after death and that a man's head would not stay in an upright position after death and so remain a hat in a natural position as described by Dorr. He also gave further testimony regarding the cuts and bruises on Marsh's head, claiming that a blow such as the dead man apparently received could not have been made while he wore a hat without receiving some mark on the hat.

In his closing argument, Attorney Barney laid particular stress upon the contention of the defense that the murder was not committed in the county where the trial is being held, but in the town of Revere, which is in Suffolk county.

"The state has presented no positive evidence that the crime was committed in Essex county," he said. "One witness has testified that he saw the defendant and Marsh's car were found 40 or 50 feet apart and they might easily have fallen from the automobile as it moved along the boulevard. None of the detectives engaged on the case was able to find any evidence of the definite spot where Marsh was killed. The man who was killed in the automobile and the only evidence as to where the machine was at the time the shots were fired has been given by the defendant himself. He says the shooting took place in Revere."

George E. Marsh went to his death without knowing that through a mistake in the trust deed, Dorr's aunt, Orpha Marsh, had been deprived of her property. Mr. Barney declared. "The title to the estate which was intended to revert to Orpha Marsh was in the name of George E. Marsh but Marsh didn't know it," he said. "Dorr knew this, for he had searched the records and had employed counsel to execute the trust deed. There was no motive for Dorr to kill Mr. Marsh, but every reason why he should want to preserve and protect that life."

George E. Crane, the Stockton, Cal. man who had the management of the Marsh property, was described by Mr. Barney as one who "engineered" the testimony against a man who had tried to get away from him. Crane, the care of Miss Marsh's property.

Attorney Barney said that Dorr did not hide himself when he came to Lynn. "He walked around the streets and stood about and he even told the man from whom he purchased the automobile that he came from California," he said.

Dorr's Diary Attacked

Continuing Mr. Barney's reference to the diary, "I am sure the jurors are satisfied that the man who wrote that diary was hostile to himself, possessed of an impulse which he could not control. The defendant does not ask you to acquit him on the ground of insanity. He simply claims the diary to be a record of his remorse and sorrow at what he had done. It is the outpouring of an unbalanced mind. If it was his daily record the jury might acquit him on the ground of insanity. It was the work of a mind beside itself."

Mr. Barney argued that in days gone by innocent women had confessed to witchcraft and been sent to their death in the very city in which Dorr was being tried for his life. "Many men and women have before now confessed to crimes that they never committed," he said.

Referring to the remark which the defendant testified Marsh made while in the auto and which he, Dorr, interpreted as a reflection on his aunt, Barney said:

There was nothing else that Dorr could do as a gentleman except get out of the automobile. He started to get out but Marsh pulled him back and then started the trouble which culminated in the shooting. When Dorr fired the revolver Marsh laid his hands upon his throat and Dorr had no thought except to protect himself."

wealth must prove guilt beyond reasonable doubt.

As Mr. Barney took his seat, Dist. Attorney Atwell rose and began the closing argument for the state.

"The question involved here," said Mr. Atwell, "is, was George E. Marsh killed with deliberate premeditation by this man? After the body of Marsh was found on the marshes the law was set in operation to ascertain who committed the crime. Witnesses were brought here from all parts of the country to show what had been done. Now the defense asks that Dorr be set free, because he shot in self defense, because the crime was committed outside this county and because the defendant was not responsible."

Circumstantial evidence

"The commonwealth's case as presented day by day in circumstantial evidence was corroborated by the testimony of the defendant himself. Even if it be true about this property and the conditions surrounding it, as claimed here, was that any justification for this crime?"

Referring to Dorr's visit to Lynn, Mr. Atwell said: "Dorr tracks his victim from day to day until he hurls him down and then kills him and soon thereafter with his hands gory with the blood of his victim writes that he did it as he had planned for two months."

At this point court adjourned for lunch.

The district attorney argued that Dorr wrote the diary for the express purpose of incriminating himself with his aunt because she had money. He declared that not until Dorr went to live with his aunt in Stockton had there been any trouble in the Marsh family. When it became necessary to perfect the title to the estate, every member of the family willingly signed off his or her interest, he said.

Dorr's Fate Will

"On Jan. 13, 1910 Dorr made a will in favor of Orpha Marsh, having learned that she had made a will in his favor," said Mr. Atwell. "Thus he began negotiating for the sale of his business in Stockton."

Again referring to the diary, Mr. Atwell said: "Did he not when he wrote in that diary have in mind that he was going to do something that would make him rich? Did he not when he writes about hiring a negro desperado to 'do the job' does he not have in mind explaining to Marsh conditions in Stockton?"

Argument Closed

The arguments in the Dorr trial were closed at noon after 3 o'clock this afternoon and a recess taken, after which the judge's charge will be made.

AN ALLEGED BLACKLIST

Interesting Case on Trial in Haverhill

SHOE STRIKERS TAKE MANUFACTURERS TO COURT

Testimony in Case Shows That a Supposed Blacklist Did Exist—Master Hardly Hearing Case

An alleged blacklist gotten up by the Haverhill Shoe Manufacturers' association has been the cause of confusion and fire and indignation on the part of the laboring people of that city and particularly among the shoe workers and as a result of the charges, John Cornhill has brought suit against the association, seeking an injunction against the alleged blacklist mentioned above. The hearing in the case has been taking place before Master Atwell of the court in Haverhill.

Apparently, the charge is that because of this blacklist containing the names of striking shoe workers these latter are unable to obtain employment in the city and that the list has been sent about to other firms.

On the witness stand yesterday, Chas. A. Richmond admitted having received a list of the striking cutters of the Witherell and Dobbins shoe manufacturing firm and that he had mailed this list to 145 persons or firms who are subscribers to his bureau. Moreover he testified in reply to questions that the above said list persons and firms had been found by him to be merchants with whom the strikers were trading before he had mailed the list. His credit bureau, he said, is a branch of the Haverhill board of trade and is under the direction of the retail committee of that organization.

Others to be called to the witness stand yesterday were Albert M. Child, manager of the Haverhill Shoe Manufacturers' association, Lawrence Callahan, general manager of the S. B. McNamee & Co. factory, William Welch, foreman for Witherell and Dobbins, and Napoleon Theriault, superintendent for Witherell and Dobbins.

Members of the various shoe manufacturing firms testified in the stand that they did not want to hire strikers, fearing that they would be trouble makers or that they would leave and return to their former places of employment when the strike was called off. One of the men to say this was Mr. Dobbins of the firm of Witherell and Dobbins. During the hearing the attorneys made attempts to bring out the facts that in several cases laborers had complained because they were unable to secure employment, being prevented by the blacklist, which it was said, had been circulated.

BAND WHO TERRORIZED PARIS

Accused of Murder, Arson, Robbery and Other Felonies—4 Members Given Death Sentences

PARIS, Feb. 27.—The trial of the 22 auto bandits who held Paris in terror for months ended today after occupying the court for 21 days, with a verdict of guilty against 18 of them on counts, including murder, arson, robbery and many other felonies. Four of the accused, including three women accomplices, were found not guilty.

The case has taken precedence in public attention over the recent presidential election, the Balkan war and the Mexican revolution.

Charged With 22 Murders

Among the indictments brought against the prisoners were no fewer than 22 murders, their victims being motor drivers, bank messengers, freight agents and policemen. They held up a number of suburban banks, broke into the residences of prominent people, killed the chief of the Paris detectives, set fire to buildings and finally when their two leaders, Benoit and Carlier, were in danger of arrest, a tremor of excitement passed over the spectators in the court room for threats were mysteriously put into circulation that something terrible would happen.

Nothing, however, occurred.

The jury remained out from 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon until nearly 1 o'clock this morning. They had to consider a series of nearly 100 questions which had been submitted to them.

Judge Explained Verdict

When they returned into court their written verdict was found so incoherent, contradictory and lengthy that it had to be explained to the presiding judge by the foreman before it could be read.

At the conclusion of the reading the spectators were stirred by the counsel for four of the bandits—Diouedonne, Callemine, Souday and Monier, against whom a number of murders were proved. Fourteen of the others were sentenced to various terms of imprisonment.

Revenge for Death of Madero

EL PASO, Texas, Feb. 27.—Francisco Villa, who the late President Madero converted from banditry and then made him a general of insurgents, is reported to have taken the field near Sonora, seeking vengeance for the death of his former chief. He disappeared yesterday from El Paso, where he had been sojourning since his escape from the penitentiary at Mexico City. He has a strong following, which is expected to join him in the western border states.

DEATHS

DONOHUE—Edward Donoghue, an old resident of St. Patrick's parish, died at the Cincinford Street hospital this morning. He is survived by his wife, Mary, one daughter, Mrs. W. H. Stacey and two sons, Michael and John Donoghue. The body was removed to the funeral parlors of Undertaker Molloy.

Regulium Mass By Bishop

A high mass of requiem for the repose of the soul of the late Michael J. Connor, of this city, was sung by Rev. Joseph Anderson, auxiliary bishop of Boston at St. Paul's church, Dorchester, this morning. Rev. William A. Connor, son of the deceased, was deacon.

as he left the courtroom.

The trial has been attended by all sorts of dramatic incidents. The jurors were threatened time and again with assassination by accomplices of the accused. Many of the 304 witnesses also were menaced and even while they were on the witness stand signs were made to them in court that they would suffer for giving testimony.

Judges Guarded

The court itself was surrounded by a large force of republican guards, and judges and jurymen were placed under special supervision and provided with strong escorts whenever they left the building.

When the taking of evidence was brought to a close and the prosecution and defense had delivered their addresses and the jury had retired, a tremor of excitement passed over the spectators in the court room for threats were mysteriously put into circulation that something terrible would happen.

Nothing, however, occurred.

was illegal for the presiding judge to ask the jury for oral explanations after they had written their verdicts. They entered a strong protest against such procedure. Their clients by the verdict of the jury were rendered liable to the death penalty and this was a last effort to avert or postpone their fate.

Another dramatic incident occurred after the court had deliberated on the protests by prisoners' counsel and decided against them on a point of law.

The presiding judge turned to the accused and asked them if they had anything more to say before sentence was pronounced upon them.

Admits Killing Bank Messenger

Callemine, who had been found guilty of murder, sprang from his seat between the republican guards and shouted:

"My comrade, Diouedonne, was not the assassin of the bank messenger Conby. It was I and my chief, Garnier."

This admission caused a tremendous sensation in view of the fact that Conby had repeatedly asserted that it was Diouedonne who had shot him.

The court retired again to deliberate at half past seven.

Dr. Russell, Who Said He Was Offered Bribe to Release Thaw, Gives Up Place

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 27.—Dr. J. W. Russell resigned today as superintendent of the Matteawan state hospital for the criminal insane. His resignation was accepted by Joseph P. Scott, superintendent of state prisons.

The resignation of Dr. Russell is the outcome of an investigation by Gov. Sulzer's committee of inquiry of a charge that W. E. Clark, the committee's former secretary used the governor's name without authority.

Dr. Russell accused John Nicholson, Anhalt, a New York lawyer, of having offered him $25,000 to aid in bringing about Thaw's release which the doctor says he refused. Anhalt denies he offered the doctor a bribe and admits he received a "retainer" of $25,000 from an agent of Thaw and that Dr. Russell, knowing this, asked him: "Where do I come in?"

BURGLAR IN NELSON'S STORE

Supposed to Have Hidden Before Closing Time Last Night—He Took Twenty Dollars

A burglar managed to gain entrance to Nelson's department store at the corner of Central and Merrimack streets last night and secured a sum of money amounting to about $20 from seven of the cash registers in the basement. He left no clue as to his identity.

Mr. Edwards, manager of the store, said today that the thief in all probability entered the place before closing time last night and secured himself within until everyone had left the store. This he said would be an easy matter for anyone familiar with the interior of the store, because of the many corners, counters, tables, stairways, etc., which afford good hiding places. Another circumstance which seems to support this theory is that the rear door of the building which leads into the receiving room, was found open some time early this morning by Officer Connolly, the policeman on that beat. This door is fastened by a sliding bolt on the inside and so could not be opened from the outside, and it would have been practically impossible for anyone to gain entrance through the front door undetected. All circumstances seem to point to the theory that the thief concealed himself within the store, last evening and after all the employees had left the establishment, looted the cash registers in the basement and then made his getaway through the rear door, unbolting it with ease from the inside and leaving it open after him. The burglar took only the bills from the cash registers and left the small change. From one of the registers, which contained $1.10, the dollar bill was taken and the cents disregarded. Either he did not care to bother with the metal money or he thought that he would be caught if he tried to dispose of a lot of dimes, nickels, quarters, etc. As far as could be seen, $20 was the extent of the loss. The matter was reported at once to the police, who are making every effort to arrest the thief.

NEWS OF THE WAR

Local Greeks Somewhat Impatient

The local Greeks are wondering what their brothers are doing in Europe, that is those who are taking part in the Balkan-Turkish conflict, for there has been no news received here for a long time. The newspaper reports on the war are very brief and not too frequent according to many people from the local Greek community.

A prominent local Greek when seen by the writer this morning commented on the fact that the outside world is almost kept in the dark on matters pertaining to the Balkan trouble. "When the war broke out" continued this party, "the newspapers were filled with news from that section of the world, but recently there has been but brief reports published, and inasmuch as the news received from men who are taking part in the conflict is also scarce, this leaves us in a state of anxiety." It would appear that the allies are hiding their time and waiting until they can close in on Constantinople.

It was reported some time ago that Dr. George Demopoulos, who was serving as physician in the Greek army, and who left Lowell shortly after the call to arms, was returning to this city, and was to sail from Athens on Feb. 1, but as far as is known the doctor has not as yet landed in this country. However, his friends believe he is on his way and will soon be among them.

The local Greeks are preparing a rousing reception for their brothers who left Lowell to enlist in the Greek army, and who are expected to return to this city as soon as the trouble is over. The affair, it is presumed, will be in the form of a parade followed by a grand banquet, but as yet no definite plans have been determined upon.

The school children enjoyed the morning owing to the ringing of the "no school" signal.

THE STATE INFIRMARY AT TEWKSBURY WANTS ADDITIONS AND OTHER IMPROVEMENTS—NEW METHODS OF TREATING INSANE

THE MEN'S HOSPITAL AT THE STATE INFIRMARY

Through the efforts of Dr. Alfred Nichols, superintendent of the State Infirmary at Tewksbury, who is known as the kindergarten system for the insane has been started at the institution under the supervision of Miss Mary E. Leonard, who has had considerable experience in this particular line of work, which is sure to prove beneficial to the many inmates. The system includes a little work and considerable exercise, especially out doors, to which the patients who are but mildly insane devote their attention most willingly for several hours a day.

The form of employment is found to be highly beneficial to the patients because one of the great needs of the insane is diversion from the line of thought on which their minds run. Some are insane on religion, some on family affairs, while others are subject to phases on which they dwell upon all kinds of subjects. The work introduced is light and it is new to all the patients. Even some who had been considered dangerous, when engaged in this manner have forgotten the things that troubled them before, and thus their minds are relieved. In fact it is a new remedy and one that gives great promise of successful results.

Miss Leonard, who was formerly kindergarten at the River Street kindergarten in Haverhill, Mass., is well versed with this work and knows how to handle her patients, whether dangerous or not, and so she is well masterful of them. She is a sister to the Rev. William E. Leonard of the Wisconsin University, and a daughter of Rev. William L. Leonard, now of Madison, Wis. She has been in the institution for over a month, and she is very much pleased with the results thus far.

While conversing with the writer, Miss Leonard said the work introduced in the kindergarten department consists mostly of weaving by hand, and each inmate is supplied with a small oil cloth mat which is perforated, and each is also given a small piece of material, which she is to weave into a little rug. She says that this work takes but a short time before the patients in her care can do the work unassisted. They are also taught to sew and other kinds of light work can be done in the interior. At 11 o'clock every forenoon the kindergarten sits at the piano in the large hall and the inmates in rows of twos march up and down the hall to a march played on the instrument and this part of the program especially is very pleasing to them.

They are also given marches around the yard, and some of them pretty soon will be given each a small patch of flowers to take care of. Those who were considered the most stupid have been so trained that now their teacher can have them do almost anything. Every other Monday Miss Ockington of this city calls at the institution and provides an entertainment for the women. Sometimes the program is carried out by talent from the infirmary, while on other occasions Miss Ockington goes with her own singers and musicians. The patients are also taught dancing and this, too, they seem to favor.

When the patients in the care of Miss Leonard have improved enough to be trusted with some kind of work alone, they are turned over to Miss Griffiths, who has charge of the industrial department for women, and there they are given all sorts of light and easy work to do. Some will crochet, others will mend clothes, and thus the work is distributed.

This work is done under most healthful conditions in the largest ward in the building with the sun shining in and the windows open to admit fresh air. This mode of treatment being considered of great interest by physicians and experts upon insanity. The system of regular social service was introduced in hospitals for sane people some time ago by Dr. Richard Cabot, and since that time it has been introduced in the country and proved very successful.

Dr. Alfred Nichols and Dr. George Pelice, superintendent and assistant superintendent respectively of the institution are anxiously awaiting the result of their demands for additions to the infirmary. This will mean an expenditure of about $80,000, but as Dr. Pelice said to the writer, what is asked for is badly needed, and the matter ought to be taken up at once.

In the first place an addition to the administration building which will consist of a larger dining room and more floor space for the business office is wanted. This will cost approximately $25,000. In speaking about the dining room Dr. Pelice said that the seating capacity of the room is now 64, and in order to feed all the inmates the table girls have to set the table as many as four times for each meal, while those who are not fortunate to secure a first place, sit and patiently await their turn. As far as the addition to the office is concerned it will afford more space, for as it is visitors have to remain in the corridor which is very inconvenient as the hall is patrolled daily by inmates going from one department to the other.

The proposed addition will have two stories, the top to be used as offices for physicians.

A pathological laboratory is also wanted at the infirmary, and if the proposition goes through this building will be erected in the vicinity of the main building. At the present time there is no place at the institution where pathological work can be done. This will be a 2½ story building and will cost about $22,000.

During the hot spell of the year the drinking water gets rather scarce and at times it is feared that the inmates will suffer. In order to make things sure, the officials of the infirmary have turned in a petition for the digging of more wells, and they also want to run a four inch pipe from the brook somewhere on their land and into the laundry. This would also relieve the situation as the water for laundry purposes is being taken from the wells. The brook is a little over a quarter of a mile from the laundry building. A new water tower is also asked for, as the one now in use was erected in 1882 and has seen better days. The proposed tank would be constructed of cement and larger than the present tower and its cost would probably come to $14,000, while the cost of digging new wells, installing a pipe from the brook, and putting an addition to the hot water supply would probably reach $16,000.

The committee from the legislature visited the premises on Feb. 1, and later Dr. Nichols appeared before them. But as in all other legislative matters the proposition will be brought before the committee on public institutions and later to the committee on ways and means and finally to that of efficiency.

There are now 2577 inmates in the infirmary, 700 of whom are insane. This is the largest number this year, but shows a little decrease from last year's figures which at the highest showed 2600.

The men's hospital at the infirmary is one of the most important buildings and one that will greatly benefit by the various improvements asked for by the officials of the institution, especially in the hot water addition. There are hundreds of men confined to the building, and the water system there it is said could be much improved. It is also one of the largest buildings and was constructed in a very sanitary way.

REASONABLE RESTRAINTS OF TRADE

Supreme Court's Modification of Sherman Anti-Trust Law Vigorously Attacked

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—The supreme court's so-called modification of the Sherman anti-trust law to invoke the rule of reason in decisions on restraints of trade is attacked in vigorous terms in a report presented to the senate by the interstate commerce commission today which points out the dangers of uncontrolled and unregulated judicial discretion and makes emphatic demand for amendments to the Sherman law to remove from the courts the power to determine what are "reasonable restraints of trade."

The committee recommends new laws to define exactly what combinations are unlawful so that both the business interests and the courts will have a standard upon which to proceed. It recommends a federal interstate corporation commission with power to supervise corporations, pass on and approve combinations and agreements, and take over the work of dissolving illegal corporations such as the Standard Oil Co. or the American Tobacco Co. Commenting upon the decision of the supreme court in the Standard Oil case in which the "rule of reason" was called in, the report, written by Senator Cummings, says: "The committee has full confidence in the integrity, intelligence and patriotism of the supreme court of the United States, but it is unwilling to repose in that court or any court, the vast and undefined powers which it must exercise in the administration of the statutes under the rule which it has promulgated. It substitutes the court in the place of congress for whenever the rule is invoked the court does not administer the law but makes the law. If it continues in force the federal courts will, so far as restraint of trade is concerned, make a common law for the United States just as the English courts have made a common law for England."

"It is inconceivable," the report adds, "that in a country that is governed by a written constitution and statute law that the courts can be permitted to test each restraint of trade by the economic standard which the individual members of the court may happen to approve."

"As the anti-trust statute is now construed," the report continues, "it is impossible for any association of men, however diligent they may be in seeking advice and however willing to follow it to know whether what they are doing or what they are about to do will be ultimately found by the supreme court to be due or an undue restraint of trade."

In the further criticism of the supreme court's "rule of reason" the report says: "The United States Steel corporation will ultimately come before the supreme court."

"In the end nine justices of the supreme court will be asked to say whether or not the restraint of trade brought about through this combination is a due or undue restraint," says the report, and the answer each justice makes to that question will depend upon his individual opinion as an economist or sociologist. The conclusion of the court being an act of legislation passed by the judicial branch of the government to fit a particular case.

"If we do not speedily prescribe, insofar as we can, a legislative rule by which to measure the form of contract or combination in restraint of trade which we are familiar or which we can anticipate, we cease to be a government of law and become a government of men and, moreover, of a very few men and they appointed by the president."

The committee urges congress to devise laws as quickly as possible which shall "specifically prescribe certain conditions upon which persons and corporations shall be permitted to engage in commerce."

"These conditions should be of a character that will tend to preserve reasonable competition," it adds, "or substantially competitive conditions and to complete independence in both quantity and conduct. They should be so clear that the business world can understand them and go confidently forward, guided by them."

The committee recommends that certain definite forms of combinations, agreements, contracts or pools now within the "twilight zone" be definitely prohibited in the law as unlawful. It declares that such organization is necessary, not only to give the attorney general the ground upon which to proceed, but also to give business interests a standard by which they may work.

A supplementary report probably will be made later by the committee regarding a definite form of a bill to preserve the desired "legislative texts and standards" to limit the scope of judicial discretion.

Separate views were filed by Senators Newlands, Tillman, Pomeroy, Gore and Dill.

Senator Newlands said he agreed with the conclusions reached in the main report.

TEWKSBURY

The dramatic club met at the home of Miss Rena Landers Monday evening. After the business had been attended to, the meeting was given over to a social hour, which all present enjoyed, returning to their homes with high praise for Miss Landers' hospitality.

Next Sunday evening there is to be an anti-trust service at the Centre Congregational church. Miss Dixon has issued a cordial invitation to all, wishing to join the chorus. There is to be a half-hour devoted to practice before the singing.

The members of the Tewksbury grange who enjoyed a visit to Andover, Mass., last Tuesday night are loud in their praises of Jesse Trull, who made it possible for them to go in his large auto truck. They left the Centre at 7 o'clock amid much laughter and blowing of horns, returning home a little more cheerily in the "wee small hours."

Miss Marion Anderson of Wrentham is spending two weeks with her uncle, Mr. James Everett, on Main street.

Cases of Measles

Miss Anna Anderson is confined to her home with the measles. Several new cases of this disease have broken out, but so far the board of health has not thought it necessary to close the schools.

The rag doll entertainment which was given at the Centre last Thursday evening is to be repeated at the North Congregational church on Feb. 28. Miss Maude Garstang will not be able to take part in the Dutch dance. Her place will be taken by Miss Gladys Phillips.

Good Supply of Ice

The people of the town who have their own private ice houses have been very liberal about getting their supplies of ice. The ice is now being cut from the thick ice and are hauled in cakes to the thickness of ten and eleven inches.

Messrs. Marshall and Smith and Mr. H. Morris, the two ice firms, expect when they get their houses filled, to stock a large number of cakes outside the houses.

Go to Wilmington

A number of Tewksbury grangers attended the "field day" held by the Wilmington grange at Wilmington today. On previous years the meeting has been held out of doors and was open to the public, but this year it is to be held in the grange hall and the pass-word will be required from all who attend. The state officers are expected to be present.

Work is progressing rapidly on Mrs. H. W. Phillips' new house on Pleasant street.

Mr. Alpha Norris is spending a few days with his people in the Centre village, having returned from an extended business trip.

Mr. H. J. Patten is looking forward to good weather when he can get his new Ford touring car home from the Ford agency in Lowell. Harold is a great auto enthusiast and had a number of demonstrations with different makes before deciding on the Ford.

Character Recital

At the meeting of the 20th Century club held last evening the organ recital was given by Miss Miller of Andover and the speaker of the evening was Rev. Mr. Fisher of Lowell.

Y. W. C. A. Items

Mr. F. F. Hayward and Mr. S. L. Hiler will give a program of music produced by the best rolls and records made for the piano and the Victrola at the Y. W. C. A. next Tuesday evening. Members who intend to avail themselves of this course are urged to come soon to receive the tickets to which their membership cards entitle them. A few tickets are still available for outsiders who will find the course a rare treat.

Miss Katy Bond George, Y. W. C. A. secretary for the students of Boston, will be the speaker Sunday at 4 o'clock. Miss George has charge of the organization of the Emerson School of Oratory and Shorthand college, and is a friend to any student in the city. Her friendship is shown in a very real way, for she assists girls in choosing right boarding places, visits them and advises them on all sorts of matters. The next day of the afternoon will be furnished by Mr. Donald Hanson.

The next innovation of the Foreign club will be an open session in the form of a Chinese evening, Thursday, March 13. The various committees meet tonight at 7:30 to make further plans for the affair. Chinese decorations, an oriental tea garden, where tea, candy, and nuts will be served and a Chinese entertainment, including a short play, will be among the attractions.

CUT THROAT WITH RAZOR

Wm. Cooper Was Temporarily Deranged

William Cooper, aged 29 years, of 17 Epping street is at St. John's hospital as a result of his attempting last night to commit suicide by cutting his throat with a razor, an act which is supposed to have been incited by the man's despondency. His chances for recovery were reported as excellent this morning by the authorities of the hospital who said that he was resting comfortably.

Cooper lives with his brother, Alfred at the address above. Last night he went to his room early and upon investigation made when he failed to return, he was found with two deep gashes in his throat and a razor beside him. The ambulance was summoned immediately and took him to St. John's hospital. It is believed the man was temporarily deranged as a result of despondency.

is unequalled as a restorative tonic. As a soothing and strengthening nerve "Favorite Prescription" allays and subdues nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, and other distressing symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic diseases of the feminine organs. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is devised and put up by a physician of vast experience in the treatment of women's maladies. Its ingredients have the indorsement of leading physicians in all schools of practice.

The "Favorite Prescription" has been sold by dealers in medicine in its liquid form for over 40 years. Now it can also be obtained in tablet form—or send 50-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce for trial box.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorates the stomach, liver and bowels. One to three a dose. Easy to take as candy.

"It Helped Me So Much."

Mrs. F. W. Myers, of Boston, Pa. says: "Four Favorite Prescription bottles were wonderful to me. Seven years ago when our first child was born I was left miserable. I suffered with two physicians without any relief. Then I went to one of the head doctors in Philadelphia. He said I must have an operation at once and that I should quit work, but that was something I could not do. I then began taking your 'Favorite Prescription' and it helped me so much. I was suffering with nervous exhaustion, and I felt as if I could never go through it again without your medicine. Will close by wishing you much success in future."

Municipal Council to Fix Appropriations—Mayor O'Donnell On Deck Again

Mayor O'Donnell was at his office at city hall this morning and though his voice has not yet regained its full scope and power he says he is feeling first rate. The mayor and Councilman Barrett have received an invitation to discuss the legislative committee on education at the Richardson hotel, Friday evening. The committee, as was stated in The Sun yesterday, is coming to Lowell to visit the textile school. The mayor is a member ex-officio of the board of trustees of the Lowell Textile school and Mr. Barrett, too, by virtue of his office as president of the municipal council.

Estimates for Year

The next meeting of the municipal council is scheduled for Saturday forenoon at 10 o'clock and it is expected that the meeting will be quite an important one. It was stated to-day that in all probability the question of appropriations for the year would be taken up. Another important matter that is lighting question has been pending for some time and the council may tackle the proposition at its Saturday meeting. The Bellows hearing, so called, will not be resumed until Tuesday.

Auto Fire Apparatus

All of the motor propelled fire apparatus in Lowell with the exception of the Robinson machine, which is located at the Race street fire house, are in-commission and the statement was made that the Robinson machine was put out in active service because the Robinson company said they wanted to see the color of Lowell's money before the machine was used. Asked if it was true that the Robinson company demanded a check before the machine was put into active service, Mr. Barrett said that was the foundation in fact for the statement.

"The Knox and the Seagraves machines are in active service, are they not?" asked the reporter.

"Yes, the Knox machine has been in commission ever since it reached Lowell and the Seagraves was put in active service yesterday," said Mr. Barrett.

"Then what is the matter with the Robinson?" was the next query.

"I am not an automobile expert," said Mr. Barrett, "and I do not want to come into argument with automobile experts."

and he told the scribe where to find the report. The scribe went down the flat and found that about all of the horses were old enough to vote. About half of the horses in the department are over 20 and two out of three of them have reached the 37th milestone in life's highway. These horses ought not to work and if it seems a bit inhuman to kill them, they might be sent to Red Acre farm.

Contract For Lumber

Bids for a considerable amount of lumber have been opened at the office of the purchasing agent and the following bids were received: Davis & Sargent, $1290; Pratt & Forrest, $1257; Anassa Pratt Co., $1235; Burnham & Davis, $1255.50; and Burnham & Davis got the contract.

Bids were also opened on brushes for the school department, but the contract has not been awarded because Purchasing Agent Foye wishes to see the brushes before making the award. The contract calls for at least one good brush as being used at the present time and the purchasing agent is from Missouri. Bids on hardware for the laundries and buildings were received as follows: Adams Hardware Co., $58.66; J. C. Bennett, $65; Bartlett & Dow, $65; W. S. Bartlett, $67.52; E. P. Smith, $59.77; Thompson Hardware Co., $72.50; J. A. Thompson, $82.

CHARTER HEARING

The Lowell Board of Trade Will Be Represented at the State House Tomorrow

A hearing on the bill accompanying the petition of John F. Donnelly and others for legislation to revise the charter of the city of Lowell and especially to provide for the election of a mayor, nine aldermen and nine school committee-men for one year terms will be given by the legislative committee on cities at the state house tomorrow forenoon at 10.30 o'clock. Asked today if he would attend the hearing Mayor H. Currier answered in the negative. It was stated by other members of the council that they would not attend the hearing and City Solicitor Hennessy said he had not received any instructions relative to the hearing. The Lowell board of trade will be represented at the hearing. Secretary John H. Currier and William C. O'Connell, chairman of the legislative

HAULED TRAIN THROUGH BLAZE

Heroic Work of Train Crew—B. & M. Freight Sheds and 3 Story Building Destroyed

BOSTON, Feb. 27.—Two fires which caused a loss estimated at $70,000 burned two Boston & Maine freight sheds and a three story building occupied by John Bryant & Sons, undertakers, early today. The fires, which were within a short distance of each other, occurred practically simultaneously and the authorities suspect that they were of incendiary origin.

A large amount of valuable merchandise was destroyed by the freight shed blaze. The loss would have been greater but for the bravery of Locomotive Engineer Hodges and Fireman Harry Smith, who drove a locomotive between the blazing sheds and hauled to safety 25 loaded freight cars.

The flames which swept the undertaking establishment, threatened to spread to many nearby tenements, but were finally confined to the shop.

50000 LOSS

Caused by Fire at North End, Boston.

Last Night—Explosion Added to Excitement of Blaze

BOSTON, Feb. 27.—Flames leaping from the windows on the fourth floor of the building at 28 Cross street, No. 28, created such a stir last night that two alarms were sounded. An explosion blew out several windows.

The blaze started from some unknown cause on the fourth floor occupied by Low Rosenbaum as a cap manufactory. The first three floors are occupied by different concerns, principally offices, and the fifth is composed of halls for dances and lodge meetings.

When District Chief Tabor arrived and saw flames mounting high into the air he sounded a second alarm, but the additional apparatus was not needed. Considerable amusement was furnished in a barber shop on the first floor. Patrons in various stages of facial adornment dashed into the street followed by barbers.

A loss of about $5000 resulted, most of it being sustained by Rosenbaum. On some of the lower floors there was some smoke and water damage.

THE FARMERS' INSTITUTE

Held at Westford With Good Attendance

The farmers' institute of the Middlesex North Agricultural society held a well attended meeting at Westford yesterday. Although Westford is situated some distance from the other towns it always receives a meeting of this kind with no little interest.

Chairman Howard Foster of Tewksbury opened the meeting and after a short address of welcome he introduced Mr. Sumner H. Reed of West Brookfield, who spoke on "The Up-to-date Farmer."

Mr. Reed spoke on the home of the up-to-date farmer as being equipped with telephone, electric lights, library and farming machinery and considered the owner of this home as a country gentleman.

Continuing, Mr. Reed spoke on the advantages Massachusetts farmers had over the farmers of other cities as Massachusetts has more cities with a population of over 10,000 people than any other state in the Union and that these cities are very evenly divided into the different counties.

He spoke of the raising of milk as being the most profitable for the Massachusetts farmer, but also stated that vegetables and many other things could be raised with a good profit to the farmer. He should watch his soil and if it is suitable for raising corn or any other vegetables it is his duty to do so.

The selling of powdered milk increases from year to year, yet a good dairy within 10 miles of the city is the most profitable branch of Massachusetts

WOMEN, LOVELY WOMEN

"Fair Tresses Made Imperial Race Ensnarers," Says Pope

The greatest of feminine attractions is a beautiful head of luxuriant hair. Glorious hair! Great poets have sung its praises; artists have endeavored to portray it accurately, but have seldom succeeded.

Are you a woman? Would you crown yourself with glorious hair? Would you add doubly to your present attractiveness?

Then go to the drug counter and ask for a bottle of Parisian Sage, the great hair tonic and beautifier. A large bottle costs but 50 cents, and in one week's time it will change harsh, lustreless, untidy hair into soft, silky and luxuriant hair.

Parisian Sage is fully guaranteed by Carter & Sherburne to stop falling hair, cure dandruff and itching of the scalp in two weeks or money back.

It kills the microbes, that's how it cures dandruff. It's pleasant and invigorating hair dressing, and is not sticky or greasy.

"I have used Parisian Sage two weeks only, yet in that time I find my hair has wonderfully increased in beauty, thickness and luxuriance. But what surprised me most was the disappearance of my dandruff. It pleases me to recommend such an efficient remedy to all my friends. Gratefully yours, Mrs. Maud Hagar, 617 West 136th street, New York City."

For sale by Carter & Sherburne and at drug stores and toilet goods counters everywhere.

chest, composed of the following young men, played popular selections in a thoroughly enjoyable manner and contributed greatly to the pleasure of the evening: F. S. Carpenter, Clifton Harrison, Emil Hartford and Benjamin Smithurst, violinists; George J. Love, J. H. Allen and V. Warren, cornettists; C. M. Cushman and T. F. Hobson, clarinetists; William G. Kinghorn, Jr., trombonist; and A. J. Dows, pianist.

The members of the Men's league who had charge of the supper were the following: Frederick Ingham, chairman; Ellis Robinson, F. H. Spooner, Forrest E. Palmer, M. L. Duncan, Frederick Whitney, George S. Gilman, F. D. Wiggin, Harris Byam, T. Lee Taylor, A. F. Grant, C. A. Morgan, Dr. J. B. Field, H. E. McPherson, C. T. Kilpatrick, C. B. Savage, Granville Hovey, James Cheney, Winthrop Bean, Mark Avery, Frank Haines, Clarence Bancroft and James Bradley.

The boys of the church, who acted as waiters, were the following: Leslie Winters, Wilbur Stevens, Howard Ingman, Arthur Haggard, Harold Hardy, Solie Kirksey, Benjamin Smithers, Arthur Ickewood, Frank Turner, Cecil Palmer and Percy McMaster.

The following committee served an excellent dinner in the lower hall at noon: Mrs. J. E. Knight, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Greig, Mrs. F. C. Wright, Mr. John Wright, Mr. Fred Blodgett, Mrs. Mary Wright, Mrs. S. L. Taylor, Mrs. Daisy Colburn, Mrs. A. J. Blaisdell, Mrs. Sargent, Mrs. Frank Miller.

The after-dinner exercises were most enjoyable. Children from the Frost school gave a group of songs and won hearty applause. Mrs. Belle Harrington Hall of Lowell was honored recently for her humorous readings. And there were snappy speeches, not lacking in funny stories, by Henry A. Smith of Lowell, William M. Harwood of Newton, Sumner H. Reed, Rev. Mr. Wallace of Westford, and Delaney Corkum of Billerica.

The vestry of the Highland Congregational church was the scene, last evening, of a very happy gathering. The fair sex were in the majority. The attraction for them was very great—a supper served by the Men's league of the church. The men of the Highland Congregational church have a reputation for serving the suppers and last night's supper was no exception to the general rule. The vestry was crowded and a second table was necessary, but for all that, the men refused to allow their wives to assist them in serving the supper. They said they wanted to "go it alone" and they certainly made a good job of it.

At 8 o'clock, and after the excellent supper had been gone through with, the young women of the church gave an interesting little comedy in three acts, "Spook Island." The cast was as follows:

Miss Margaret Henley, an heiress. Miss Alice Lugham. Miss Euphemia Addison, her chaperon. Miss Ethel Kimball. Miss Sarah Jane Lovejoy, from the Lost Nation. Mrs. C. W. Lloyd. Katie O'Connor, Miss Henley's secret. Miss Bessie Adams.

Miss Henley's guests. Barbara Livingstone. Miss Louise Bancroft. Miss Louise Rogers. Marion Reynolds. Miss Eva Craven. Little Lizzie, the ghost.

The Silent Sisters, Miss Jane Flemming. Jack Eggleston and Jane Reading. Miss Alice. Miss Mabel Rogers. Miss Alibi. Miss Helen Audet. Act One—Miss Henley's country house.

Acts Two and Three—Spook Island. Both before the play and between the acts, Cushman's T. M. C. A. orchestra.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Observed by Mr. and Mrs. Farnham—They Were Married Sixty-two Years Ago Yesterday

Mr. and Mrs. William L. Farnham, of 59 Gates street, yesterday observed the 62nd anniversary of their marriage. The happy couple were showered with congratulations and were made the recipients of many beautiful bouquets. Mr. Farnham is 87 years of age and Mrs. Farnham is 80. They are still in excellent health and their stories of the early days in Lowell are very interesting.

Both can trace their lineage back to the earliest settlers of New England, their ancestors being Indian fighters, Revolutionary soldiers and leaders in the civil affairs of the towns.

Celebrating their anniversary with them were three of their children, Onsville M. Farnham, a teacher in the Roxbury Latin school; Hon. Frederick W. Farnham, of the engineer's department and Mrs. Mary A. Hardie of this city.

Levi E. Farnham, engineer of the city of Camden, N. J., was here last week, but was unable to remain until the actual anniversary rolled around. A family dinner was a feature of the informal celebration.

Services Both Morning and Evening Sunday—Supt. Redmond Welch Will Address Chamber Club

Lenten services will be held in the St. Anne's mission on Friday evening Feb. 28 at 7.30 o'clock. The address will be given by the Rev. Samuel H. Jobe.

The morning prayer and holy communion will be held in the church on Sunday morning at 10.15. Rev. Appleton Grannis, rector of St. Anne's church, will officiate. The Sunday school session will be held at 9.30 and there will be an evening service at 7 o'clock.

At the regular meeting of the A. S. John Chamber club next Tuesday evening, Mr. Redmond Welch, superintendent of the Lowell police department, will address the members. The meeting will be held in the parish house at 7.45 and all are cordially invited to attend.

SOCIAL AND FRATERNAL

Members of Porcas Temple, No. 12, P. S., held their regular business meeting recently in Pythias hall with a large attendance. The feature of the gathering was the installing of the officers. A. Proctor of Haverhill, accompanied by G. M. Ida Wiley and G. S. Emma Newberry, all of Haverhill.

The officers installed were the following: P. C., Harry E. Porter; V. E., Alice Schofield; E. S., Alice Jenkins; E. J., Irene Kittredge; M. of T., Ada Myrick; M. of H. and C. Cora Glidden; M. F., Margaret Griffiths; P. of T., Neill Porter; G. of G. T., Etta Fullerton. Deputy Jennie Proctor was present.

At the regular meeting of the United Spanish War Veterans as a token of the esteem of the members of the organization. There were a number of visitors from other temples.

United Spanish War Veterans

At the regular meeting of the United Spanish War Veterans Capt. Alexander Grole, Jr., was present and gave a talk on the activity at the military post along the coast. A concert on the Victrola was furnished by the Steiner Co. and refreshments were served. The team from the camp will bowl the Co. G men at the army alleys on Saturday night at 8 o'clock.

Important business was transacted at the recent meeting of Centralville lodge, and several applications were received. The charter was ordered draped in mourning for the late Brother Everett L. Taylor of Tewksbury.

UNITED IRISH LEAGUE

Arranges for Big Meeting on March 16

The committee of the United Irish league, which is arranging for the monster meeting on March 16, met last night and discussed the outlook.

It was decided to send out an appeal to the friends of the cause, in order that the sum of $500 may be raised before May 1. It was announced that the Irish party must conduct a continuous campaign in England, Ireland and Scotland, in order to prevent any change in sentiment that might jeopardize the Asquith ministry on which the fate of the home rule measure now depends.

At the committee meeting it was announced that the speaker would be P. J. O'Keefe, Esq., one of the most prominent lawyers in Chicago, a man who distinguished himself as a member of the vice commission of Chicago and an orator of well known ability.

The committee has secured a finely engraved souvenir to be given to those who contribute a dollar or more to the funds.

At the convention in Philadelphia last September, the local branch of the league pledged itself to raise $500 this year, and as funds are needed at the present time to conduct a continuous campaign throughout England, Scotland and Ireland, the present demand will undoubtedly be met in a very generous spirit.

The meeting of Sunday, March 16, will be free so that there will be nothing to prevent any friend of the cause from attending. Mr. James J. Flynn, the well known Boston baritone, who made such a hit in Irish songs when he appeared here two years ago, has consented to sing at this meeting, so that a rare treat is in store for those who attend. Several local singers will assist in the concert feature, so that the meeting will undoubtedly be one of the largest held here for many a year.

DEADLOCK IN STRIKE

Of the Boston Garment Workers

BOSTON, Feb. 27.—A deadlock has been reported apparently in the men's clothing strike which was called a week ago. Of the five thousand garment workers who left their places of employment three thousand are still out, according to authoritative figures.

Practically all the small manufacturers have granted the strikers demands and have taken back the workers but the owners of the large establishments have been unable to reach an agreement with the strike leaders.

Most cities and small towns as well have their neglected neighborhoods. The latest article in a series which The Survey is publishing on "Satellite cities," by Graham Romeyn Taylor, points out that the towns across the Mississippi from St. Louis are "out in the cold" so far as sharing the civic life of the larger city is concerned.

But even one of these "east side" towns, has in turn, its own forlorn and outcast community, "Hungry Hollow." Isolated from the main part of Granite City, this neighborhood is one of the largest settlements of the Bulgarians and Macedonians to be found in the United States, according to the investigations of the federal immigration commission. At one time there were several thousand, but the number diminished, and when 600 went back to Bulgaria, war last fall scarcely 1000 were left.

With only two paved streets, practically no sanitary supervision, and excessive overcrowding—as many as 200 living at one time in 45 rooms, the conditions of these immigrants, are peculiarly wretched and lacking in the advantages America is supposed to afford. Furthermore, they are exploited by their own countrymen who, through "Macedonian mercantile companies" sell them everything from a glass of beer to a newspaper in their own language. Yet they live in the cheapest way and save a large proportion of their wages. From one bank no less than $30,000 was drawn in six weeks during the Balkan war.

An American almost thinks himself in a foreign country when he goes over into Hungary Hollow. In the latter part of May you will find every doorway and window framed in green boughs brought from the nearest woodland. On all sides you will hear singing and the music of the concertina, while every saloon and coffee house overflows with all sorts of festivity. You will be astonished to learn the occasion for it all, these comparatively uneducated foreigners are having a most hilarious time—and some of them are getting uproariously drunk—in honor of the origin of the monastic alphabet and the two monks, St. Methodius and St. Cyril, to whose credit that literary labor is due. During the Balkan war all such festivity as dancing and gay music was abandoned; national hymns and ballads of descriptive of soldier life and bravery in death were mainly to be heard.

PRES. MELLEN AND HIS ROAD

In his instructive address before the board of trade the other evening, Vice-President Byrnes of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, appeared to be the very opposite of the public ideal of a brusque, dominating railroad man.

Mr. Byrnes described the growth of the railroads in New England, pointing out how and when they became part and parcel of a great system and showing at the same time how misunderstandings arose and how through consolidation competition was replaced by government regulation.

What Mr. Byrnes impressed most emphatically upon his hearers was, that the railroads are necessarily identified and deeply interested in the success of the communities they serve. Unless the cities and towns prosper the railroads passing through them will suffer. Moreover, if a man in business feels that a better opportunity awaits him at a distance, he is free to go there; but the railroad must make the best of its location and if the business is inadequate for its support, bankruptcy or a bargain sale will be the company's only recourse. When there were a great many competing railroads many went to the wall, but with consolidation the service has been improved while the rates have not gone up in proportion to the great advance in the cost of living. Rates have not been generally advanced for the past fifteen years although the cost of labor, material and everything the railroad has to buy has gone up. This is one beneficial result of the consolidations that have done away with many of the independent terminals and the unnecessary officials.

That the railroad is just as anxious to bring prosperity to New England as any of the boards of trade is a fact emphasized by Mr. Byrnes and if we are to judge from the efforts of President Mellen to boom New England and particularly the port of Boston, there is no gainsaying Mr. Byrnes' statement.

That New England should be discriminated against in rates eastward is an obstacle to our commercial progress. The rates from the west to Boston are greater than to Baltimore. This explains why western exporters send their shipments to Baltimore instead of to Boston. It explains also why the European steamers after unloading at the port of Boston go to Baltimore to get a cargo for the return trip. This disadvantage will have to be overcome before Boston as a port can compete with the other eastern ports. President Mellen would undoubtedly have great influence in securing an arrangement favorable to Boston if he be not harassed with criticism that in the opinion of his friends and a fair section of the public is unjust. Mellen is a native of Lowell and it would be his native city to condemn his course in advance of any evidence to prove that he has either violated any law or proved in any way false to the interests of New England.

It appeared from Mr. Byrnes' plain statement that the railroads are in a bad way between a prejudiced public on one side and stringent government regulation on the other. If as he intimates, the railroads and the public can make common cause and if the corporation hating as a new profession would cease, there would be better business for all concerned, better service and more widespread prosperity.

It may as well be conceded that railroad competition is no longer possible nor desirable, and that the more consolidation we have under proper government regulation, the better service we may expect and the greater will be the development of our railroad systems. This is Mr. Mellen's idea and it is one that is bound ultimately to prevail although now opposed by the spirit of the Sherman anti-trust law and by a large section of the public. We cannot have two parallel and competing lines running from Boston to Canada nor from east to west. The sooner the general public and the government at Washington reaches this conclusion the better will it be for the nation at large. The government's position today in reference to competition of railroads is untenable.

ACCURATE DEATH REGISTRATION

The association of life insurance presidents has prepared a brief regarding the need for accurate statistical registration of births and deaths to be presented to the legislatures of states which do not at present keep adequate records of them. The number of deaths annually in this country must now be merely guessed at, because of the lack of a thorough or uniform system of registration. In their brief the life insurance officials point out that such statistics, showing the number of deaths, their cause and location, are necessary for the elimination of preventable diseases in this country.

While the primary intention of the insurance officials is to secure legislation for a more economic conduct of their business, they have pointed out weaknesses in a system that is of the utmost importance as it affects the welfare of the country in general. A study of the data compiled by states where mortality figures are accurately collected, justifies the conclusion that one and a half million people die annually in this country. Of these, doctors estimate that 650,000 are due to preventable diseases. Dr. Allan J. McLaughlin of the United States public health service recently stated that in typhoid fever alone the number of preventable cases each year would probably reach 175,000 and that the deaths therefrom that could be avoided would total 16,200. He estimated the economic loss from this disease annually at not less than one hundred million dollars. It seems almost incredible that a matter of such importance as statistical information, bearing as it does on the possible saving of over half a million lives, should be left to conjecture. This is particularly regrettable when we realize that the exact figures bearing on deaths from preventable diseases may be ascertained by a comparatively simple method already successfully employed in many states.

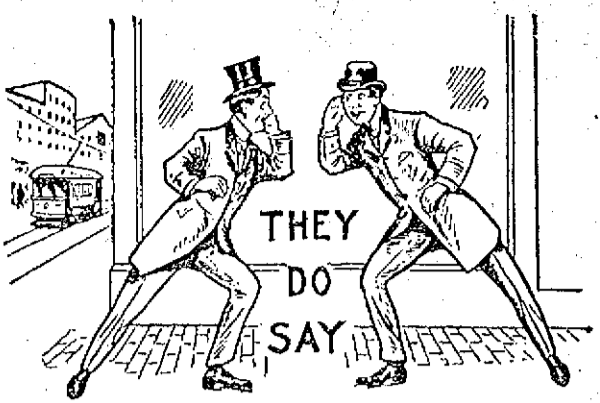

Epidemics and pestilence are suppressed only by the immediate application of preventive measures at the exact time and place of outbreak. We have in our health regulations the scientific knowledge and means of prevention, but frequently the presence of communicable disease, location and seriousness, become known only from the death report. A proper death registration not only permits health officials to attack incipient contagion, but shows the exact location, age and class of people affected, and the relation of the disease to race, season, and other condition. It makes possible the application of our scientific knowledge at the proper place and time.

A complete, accurate and uniform system of death registration is necessary also for the purpose of comparison. No city can determine offhand whether the amount of its preventable diseases is excessive or not unless the data of previous years and of other cities of like size and similar situation are available. The average citizen regards the condition of his home town as normal but his self-satisfaction is frequently due to ignorance of conditions in other cities. Without mortality figures for comparison we can never hope to know definitely which public health measures are effective and which are ineffective. Now that the government has waked up to the fact that the country suffers enormous preventable economic loss because of contagious disease one of the first measures to ameliorate the condition should be the enactment of laws in all the states, by which a thorough and uniform system of birth and death registration can be established.

THE STATEN ISLAND INDIAN

In New York city at present are picturesque groups of Indians in their quaint native costumes, who have come from the west and northwest to be present at the dedication of a memorial to their race which is to be erected in Staten Island at the entrance of New York harbor. The memorial will consist of the gigantic figure of an Indian warrior which, in its proportions, will rival the famous Statue of Liberty. It is fitting that such a statue should be erected, and the site is appropriate and worthy of the subject. Immigrants of the future in their first glimpse of America will see not only the noble figure of Liberty with her beacon light but this pathetic reminder of the original and only native race that was crushed out in the westward march of civilization. It will serve as a revelation of the enterprising spirit of a great nation that in a few centuries changed the land of the Indian with its trackless forests and unbroken rivers into the new America of which New York is the embodiment.

If only the bronze Indian were given the power of thought and speech how many things he might say that would guide and warn us. Not only would he, the native American, plead the law of equality and humanity for the incoming alien, but looking over on the horizon of towers and skyscrapers he would in all probability find a parallel between the decadence that destroyed his own once vigorous race, and the modern reckless pursuit of wealth and pleasure that will as surely destroy any race if not checked in time by reason. Finally, musing on the legends of his vanished kindred, he would sweep the restless panorama of the present with a keen glance, and finding nothing of the old free life of forest and glade, he would look over to the majestic figure of the Bartholdi statue and cry out in the words of Madame Roland, "O Liberty, how many excesses are committed in thy name!"

OUR CITY CHARTER

It can scarcely be expected that such a complete change as the introduction of the commission form of government would prove acceptable to every citizen in this community. Some few desire to amend some of its provisions. In Boston the same spirit is manifested. In both cities, however, the advantages of the commission form of government over the old system have been proved satisfactorily, and the weight of public opinion is against changes after such a short trial. On the whole the commission plan in cities like Lowell is an effective one and with the choice of competent and honest commissioners it can be relied on for a satisfactory regulation of municipal affairs. There will, of course, be faults in the system, as there are in all systems, but these can be discovered from year to year and gradually remedied without having recourse to any sudden or radical change before we have had time to get thoroughly conversant with the provisions of the charter. The main fault urged against our present charter is that it has reduced the number of offices to a degree out of all proportion to the number of candidates.

In the world of pagan mythology which he loves so well, J. Pierpont Morgan finds his prototype in the figure of Atlas who balances the world on his shoulders. The news of Morgan's recent illness sent a shock through the financial world that caused people to wonder what a cataclysm his death would be. His name and fortune may be all powerful in the world of art, but his influence on the finances of industrial America is far deeper.

The demand for nurses has been so great in Lowell within the last few months that nurses, surely in need of fearing the caller may be a doctor. A nurse who came here from Somerville in search of a few days' rest was unfortunate enough to visit the local hospital from which she graduated. The visit resulted in her being persuaded to go out on a scarlet fever case. Her old friend, the superintendent, pleaded with her to take the case and the dear girl could not refuse.

Woonsocket Call: The insane offices of the English frigate are beginning to produce expected fruits. Whore-smashing, mail-destruction, bomb-throwing and incendiarism have finally engendered a state of public mind in which the sheltered and protected civility is missing. The British people harassed and despoiled by these mad women, are rapidly getting into a state of revolt against the frigate.

Nickels and Slot Machines
New Bedford Times: The information that the treasury department has begun the coining of new nickels shows that the government has given no consideration to the proprietors of the nickel machines who protest that the new coins would not fit their devices.

A better respect, we think, might have been paid to these interests. They are not a negligible business, and the investment of hundreds of thousands of dollars. To protect themselves against fraud they have perfected their machines to reject slugs and counterfeiters, and adjusted them to the exact proportions of the nickels in circulation. Their protest against any change in size and weight is entirely reasonable. To say that their protest came too late, that it was not made until the government had completed all preparations for the coining of new nickels, is to impose an excuse for overlooking their objection.

It would have been a loss of less expense for the treasury department to have issued its new coinage to the standards of slot machines than for the proprietors of such contrivances to adjust them to the new coins. Why impose a hardship on legitimate business?

EDUCATIONAL PROGRESS
Buffalo Chamber of Commerce a Leader For Vocational Training—Tennessee Spent Twice Last Year

The Buffalo, N. Y., chamber of commerce is leading in a movement to organize vocational training and vocational guidance in direct connection with the industrial, educational and social needs of the city. Under the leadership of the chamber a committee composed of business men, school men and social workers is making a preliminary survey of the city preparatory to mapping out a definite program of work to be under the immediate supervision of E. W. Weaver, vocational director of the Brooklyn Boys' High school.

Tennessee spent nearly twice as much money last year for high-school purposes as the year before, and the actual number of high-school buildings increased one-third. Other significant increases reported by the state high school inspectors are: Enrollment, 49 per cent. increase; during the year, daily attendance, 47 per cent. increase; length of average term, ten days more than the year before; and teachers, 55 per cent. more. In the meantime the average cost of high school tuition has been reduced from $4 to $2.96 per month.

Superintendent Joyner, of North Carolina, is making a strong plea for better educational facilities for that state. Among other things, he urges that women be made eligible to serve on school boards, in order that the schools may have the benefit of their peculiar fitness for the work of education. He declares, "By nature and temperament, and because of their strategic position in the home and in the training of childhood, women are vitally concerned and deeply interested in the work of the schools."

The Phelps-Stokes lectures on the negro problem given at the University of Virginia this year included the following subjects: Race relationships in the south; black-belt negro labor in slavery and freedom—its efficiency and its cost; the economic negro; the public health relation of the negro problem in the south. The aim of these lectures is "to arouse a scientific interest in the better adjustment of the negro to American civilization."

LYNCHING DISGRACE

Aut Comments Upon the Attitude of Governor Blewett—65 Lynched During 1912

The closing month of the year 1912 witnessed an incident which probably could not happen in any other civilized country. The governor of one of the oldest states in the Union, in an address before the conference of governors, defended the practice of lynching, and declared that he would willingly lead a mob to lynch a negro who had assaulted a white woman.

To the civilized world, which has demanded an explanation as to why human beings have been put to death in this lawless fashion, the excuse given has been the same as that voiced by Governor Blewett a short month ago. Yet statistics show that in none of the thirty years of lynching has more than one-fourth of the persons hanged, shot and buried to death, been even charged with this crime. During the year 1912, sixty-five persons were lynched. But less than a sixth of these persons were lynched because the mob believed them to be guilty of assaulting white women. In some cases the causes have been trivial. And it appears that the northern states have permitted this lawless practice to develop and the lives of helpless victims to be taken with as much brutality, if not as frequently, as those of the south—witness Springfield, Ill., a few years ago, and Coatesville, Pa., only last year.

In the celebration of the fiftieth year of the negro's freedom, does it seem too much to ask white civilization, Christianity and democracy, to be true to themselves on this as all other questions? The nation cannot profess Christianity, which makes the golden rule its foundation stone, and continue to deny equal opportunity for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness to the black race.

When our Christian and moral influences not only condone these principles theoretically, but work for them practically, lynching will become a thing of the past, and no governor will again make a mockery of all the nation holds dear in the defense of lynching for any cause.—Ida B. Wells-Barnett in The Survey.

The court says the state statute does not conflict with the federal act, but expressly recognizes whatever may be done under it and gives it the full effect required by the federal constitution.

"The statute merely intended," says the court, "to assure to the people of this state something like the same freedom from diseased meat for food coming from other states which is required by the federal act for those branches of interstate commerce over which in this respect the power of congress has been exerted."

"Unless statutes like the one under consideration are valid there is no way by which the people of a state can protect themselves against noxious food of this sort."

The defendant was fined $25 upon his conviction, which stands. This was a test case to determine the constitutionality of the new law.

Manager Gray received word last night of the long looked for meeting of the schedule committee of the Boston and Lowell leagues, which will be held in the American house, Boston, tomorrow. With Duffy practically assured of moving his franchise to Portland, the committee can now go ahead and arrange its playing schedule without any difficulty. All the clubs will be represented at the meeting tomorrow.

George Allen, the former English runner and now the crack mile of the Portland team, has been protested for the B. A. A. meet Saturday. Allen is looked upon as the favorite in this event if the authorities in charge of the meet will allow him to compete. Lowell's followers of the sport will remember watching this boy take the banks over the long route when he was running for Boston English High. It is claimed that Allen is over the age limit for junior competition.

The Portland fans have organized the Portland Association. This organization will have as its chief function the providing of a baseball park for Hugh Duffy's team and is incorporated for $10,000. The Maine town certainly wants to see some baseball this year. Portland has turned out some of the country's most noted diamond stars. Harry Lord, Jack Combs and Bill Carrigan are all natives of that city.

Carroll Libbee, the crack little sprinter of the high school track team, has contracted the measles from some unknown source. Coupled with that the cold shower baths which he took after the regular practice last Monday brought on a bad chill and the boy has been confined to his bed since that time. Libbee was entered in the 40-yard dash at the big meet Saturday in Boston but will be unable to compete.

Freddie Welsh does not think much of himself as a drawing card. All he wants is to win his big fight with Young E. Brien, win, draw or lose. If Welsh persists in any foolish hold-outs there are a couple of other boys who would draw practically as well and who would not expect the time and fixtures. Matt Wells or the Australian champion, McEgan, would be a good card.

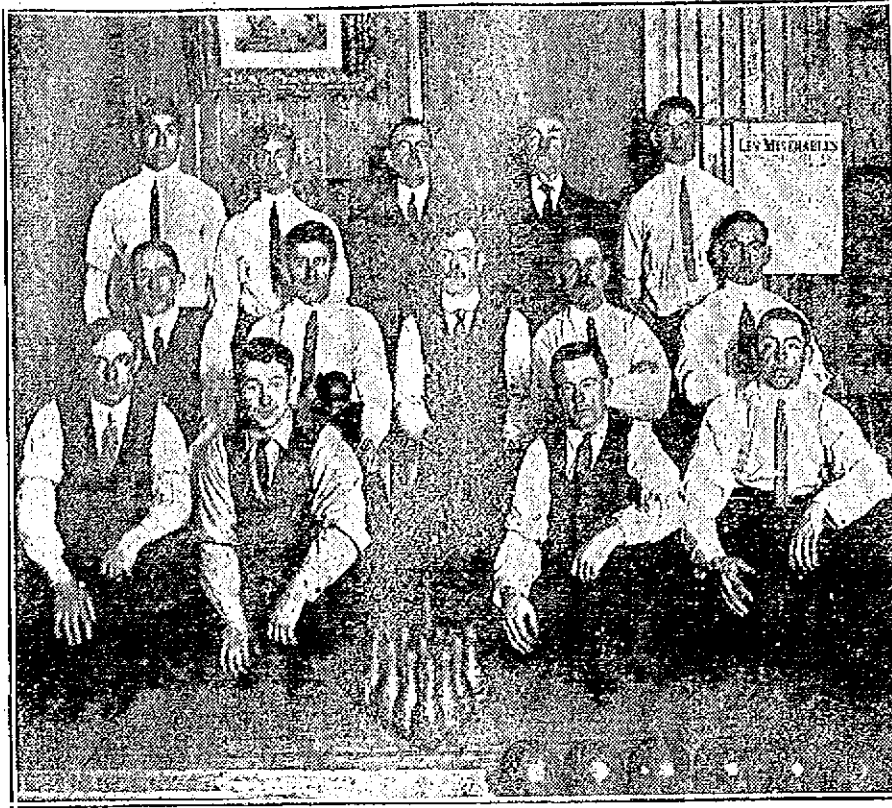

The New Mexico house of representatives has reported favorably on an anti-flight bill for the state. If this bill goes through, and indication is point that way, it will be a felony to hold any contests of any description in New Mexico.

Eddie Plank, the Athletics' twirler, is one of the oldest players in big league ball today. Plank is still pitching good ball and may last several years more. The Philadelphia pitcher has just passed his 35th year.

The recent court decision which was handed down over in New York which allowed that oral betting was not a crime and that the proprietors could not be blamed for these kind of wagers has raised quite a bit of excitement among the staff of followers. Already there is talk about opening up some of the metropolitan tracks in the spring. The Gotham racing associations will certainly open up if there is the least chance in the world of getting by.

The Swedish secretary of the Olympic committee has written to James E. Sullivan, the American secretary, thanking him for the courtesy of the American committee in sending back the prizes which Thorpe was requested to return. Now about thanking the Swedes for their return instead of a set of officials who sit down and study out an athlete's amateur standing by equations. To Thorpe is due all the credit for this unprecedented act.

The above photograph includes the members of two bowling teams composed entirely of the brothers of the respective families. The McMahon brothers, seven in number, and the father, as well as the McCluskey brothers of Lawrence, all appear. The unique idea of having a matched interfamily game was first conceived by the Lowell boys and they straightaway challenged any team of like composition in New England.

The Lawrence family accepted the challenge and the first game was rolled off with six-man teams last Saturday night. The local team was defeated in this contest by the very narrow margin of four pins. This is the first of a three-game series. The second game will be rolled on April 10 and the final match of the series on May 20. Although beaten in their initial contest, the McMahon brothers feel certain that the completion of the third game will mean a victory for the Lowell team.

The losers of the series will provide a banquet for the members of both families at some hotel in Lawrence or Lowell, and this fact lends additional spice to all of their matches. A large crowd of friends always attend the contests between these teams and good natured fun and good fellowship is the passport.

Veteran of Big Fire Dead
BOSTON, Feb. 27.—Michael C. Sullivan, one of the Barnacoat veterans who fought the great conflagration that swept the business section of Boston in 1872, has died at the City hospital morgue. Efforts are being made by his friends to see that he secures a burial that befits the veteran of scores of big Boston fires.

Pfeiffer Signs With Lynn
Manager Pat Flaherty, the new leader of the Lynn baseball club of the new England league, will receive with his day's mail at his Chicago home today the signed contract of Frank "Jeff" Pfeiffer of 102 Greenbrier street, Dorchester, who pitched for Lowell last season.

THE ATHLETIC RELATIONS
Of Lowell and Lawrence
to be Settled

A conference between Mr. Irish, principal of the Lowell high school, and Mr. James Harn, headmaster of the high school in Lawrence, is looked for in the near future. The object of this meeting will be the settling for good and all of the status of the two schools with regard to the athletic relations. There are three big schools in the so-called Merrimack valley, the high schools of Lawrence, Haverhill and Lowell. A few years ago a league was formed among these three schools, but relations were broken off between two of the schools, so the whole scheme was disrupted. Since that time athletic relations have been carried on between them in a rather hit or miss fashion and no real definite agreement has been reached.

Football is the sport where more money is made by the school teams than other branches of sport. The big game were practically all the money of the entire season is made, however, comes on Thanksgiving day, when the holiday crowd turns out in full strength no matter what the weather may be. For the past several years Lawrence and Lowell as well as Lawrence and Haverhill have not been on speaking terms, to put it figuratively, so that the only game that was played between the three schools was that played between Lowell and Haverhill. Lowell has always been the guest in the previous arrangement of games, as Lawrence and Haverhill favorably played their annual game on Thanksgiving day. Therefore, when negotiations were broken off between Lowell and Lawrence Mr. Irish tried to arrange the annual game for the holiday date, but the head of athletics at Haverhill High could not see the wisdom of such a move, so the proposition fell through.

New, however, athletic relations have been resumed between Lowell and Lawrence, and negotiations are under way between the heads of athletics in the two schools. If this schedule goes through with an agreement for a football game to be played on Thanksgiving day between Lawrence High and Lowell High, both teams will undoubtedly find that the best athletic arrangement possible has been inaugurated.

TWO PARDONS GRANTED

Arthur Deaconson of Haverhill and Joseph A. Lee of East Boston the Fortunate Men

BOSTON, Feb. 27.—Pardons were granted yesterday to Arthur Deaconson of Haverhill, who on May 19, 1908, was sentenced to serve from eight to 10 years in state prison for assault with intent to commit murder, and to Joseph A. Lee of East Boston, sentenced on March 5, 1912, to two years in the house of correction for attempted larceny.

In the case of Deaconson, the pardon was petitioned for by his wife, upon whom the assault was attempted, but who was not injured in any way, and who is willing to return to her husband.

Falls 30 Feet in Lift Shaft
BOSTON, Feb. 27.—Arthur Forbes, 12, living at 54 West Rutland street, South End, backed into an elevator well in that building last night while on the third floor. He fell to the bottom of the well, a distance of about 30 feet. Forbes received a fractured left thigh, scalp wound and bruises. He was taken to the City hospital.

CHANGE IN FINE FORM ANOTHER QUIET NIGHT

Peerless Leader Ready for 1913 Season

The Bowlers Had Other "Matches"

One glance at Frank Chance is convincing that the former leader of the Cubs is again in perfect health. In fact, Chance never looked better in his life, and there is no doubt that he can play ball. Chance is sure to be a success in New York regardless of the showing his team makes in the coming campaign. It will not take him long to realize what is necessary to assure his success. Just as soon as he makes it plain to the powers that be that he will not tolerate interference he will have started on the right path. There have been too many tale carriers connected with the New York management. A system of espionage has been used on former managers which has proved a serious handicap. Chance will not stand for that sort of treatment, and he will have nerve enough to advise himself. It is of course absurd to predict a high position in the race for Chance's team the coming season, though there is no doubt that his presence will strengthen it considerably. But even Chance, who is regarded as one of the wisest men in baseball, must be given time to build up his aggregation.

While it is true that McGraw will try out a lot of young players for both the in and out field, it would not be at all surprising if the Giants' lineup when the season opens is just as it was during the world's series last fall. When a team has won two pennants in a row it is not an easy matter for a manager to convince himself that he should make changes in his lineup. Though the Giants have not been successful in either of the recent world's series, the team has done remarkably well in its own league. It has surely been a winning combination, and though McGraw may find some clever youngsters among his recruits he is sure to think a long while before he benches one of the players who helped the team win pennants to make room for a newcomer.

Football coaches complain that the sport pages ruin many promising young players. If they had their way they would pass a law prohibiting any newspaper from coining a youngster but the coaches are barking up the wrong tree.

When Jim Delahanty, the former second baseman of the Detroit Tigers, was asked if he thought the use of the spitball spoiled many young pitchers he said:

"It isn't the spitter that spoils them. If they had any brains they wouldn't use it, and since they haven't any brains they wouldn't make good anyway."

The same thing holds good of the young "grinder" Delahanty, who gains sudden prominence by carrying the scrubs' ball fifty yards for a touchdown through the whole varsity team. If his skill is of the elastic sort, what the papers say of him is of no account. It is no wonder what his friends at college tell him, and their words are but a faint glow in the light of what he thinks of himself. If he is a fool he figures that he is a Heston, Ted Coy and Tom Shewlin rolled into one. If he had sense he knows how his end of the game is played, and how his quarter back slipped as he lunged for him.

If he goes down under a torrent of admiration it makes no difference. As Delahanty says, "He hasn't enough sense to make good anyhow."

Catchers do not seem to last long these days. After four or five years of steady work the strain seems to tell on them, and there are few instances where a catcher is at his best after that period. Three years ago Charley Street and Charley Schmidt of the Detroit team were one of the good catches as could be found, yet both have dropped out of fast company and, in fact are finding it a difficult matter to hold their own in the minor leagues. Many of the old catchers have gone down with them and only a few are hanging on to the big league jobs. Billy Sullivan is one of them, but Sullivan is working only seldom, and his days in the majors, too, are numbered.

Patrick brothers of Vancouver have an offer from Los Angeles to bring a couple of hockey teams here next spring and give an exhibition of how the game should be played. They are also negotiating with the owners of rinks in Melbourne and Sydney, Australia. The trip would occupy about six or seven weeks, several exhibitions being given in each city.

MUST LEAVE WIFE ALONE

John Cannon, in Worcester Court Ordered to Quit Boarding House She Keeps in Clinton

WORCESTER, Feb. 27.—Judge Forbes issued a decree in probate court yesterday ordering John Cannon of Clinton to quit the boarding house kept by his wife at 12 High street and to leave her alone. Cannon followed her to a hearing on a petition for divorce for separate support.

According to the story told by Mrs. Cannon "everybody worked but Cannon and he sat around all day," not at home, but in saloons. She told the court he was in the habit of coming home and drinking trouble among her brothers. She said she could get along better without him and that this is the second time she had to appeal to the court.

Crushed Finger
Mary Smith, of Fayette street, an employe of the Hamilton Manufacturing Co., had the index finger of her right hand crushed in a machine there early this morning. The ambulance was summoned and conveyed her to the Lowell hospital where the wound was dressed.

Lacrosse Association

The Canadian Amateur Lacrosse association, formed recently, is to be the governing body of Canada's national game.

There were only two games reported by the league secretaries last night on the local alleys. The Polices won their match from the Red Sox in the 21st of J. bowling league by the score of 156 to 149. These two teams bowled as usual with six men on each side. McCarron of the winners was high with 285.

The Ajax bowlers took their game from the U. S. C. Machines in the Heinz-Carridge league by the close score of 153 to 146. Arnold, the Ajax anchor man put up the highest string of 283.

EXHIBITION OF WORK

Of Boys and Girls of the Industrial School

An exhibition of the work of the girls and boys of the evening department of the Industrial school will be held this evening and promises to attract a large number to view the results of the teaching of the students. Tonight will see the closing of the evening girls department and tomorrow night that of the boys.

At the Morrill school at the North common there will be exhibited the work of the girls, while the work of the boys, such as plumbing, machine work, carpentry, etc., will be shown at the old North school. This evening the Mann school will be open for inspection.

ENVELOPED IN FLAMES

L. V. Noonan, Cabletapper, Nearly Burned to Death on Pole at New Britain, Conn.

NEW BRITAIN, Conn., Feb. 27.—"Hello, Bill," greeted L. V. Noonan, a cable splicer, as he waved his torch from the top of a telephone pole to a friend passing beneath in a twinkling. Noonan was enveloped in flames, his torch having ignited his pan of kerosene and the flames having communicated to his clothes.

Painfully he made his way to the ground, where a passing automobilist jumped from the car and rushed to his aid. Noonan was rescued with a rope. Noonan's home is in Burlington, Vt. He will recover.

C. L. Pollock Dead

BOSTON, Feb. 27.—Clement L. Pollock, veteran newspaper man, political speaker and lecturer, died suddenly yesterday at his home, 124 Glenway street, Dorchester, from a cerebral hemorrhage.

Pollock was 61 years of age. He was known to hundreds of newspaper men from one end of the country to the other, was a writer of broad training.

Paintings of Mrs. Wilson

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 27.—Because of the slow response to the offer of the paintings by Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the president-elect, an exhibition for the past two weeks at the Arts and Crafts guild all of them have been received at lower rates.

There are 25 paintings, all landscapes and all apparently of New Jersey scenes. They are now priced at $15 to $300 each. Former prices were as high as $500. Proceeds of the sale of the paintings are to be devoted to the enlargement of the Martha Berry school for boys and girls at Rome, Ga., a city which is the home of Mr. Wilson's near relatives.

Members of Bath Tub Trust Fined

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 27.—Two more members of the so-called bath tub trust recently convicted of criminal conspiracy to restrain trade paid their fines yesterday after they had previously filed motions to have the verdict rendered against them in federal court set aside.

White Slave Sentenced

BOSTON, Feb. 27.—Salvatore Longo of Hartford, Conn., was sentenced today to two years in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., under the Mann white slave law. Salvatore Zuel, proprietor of a hotel in Pittsburgh with whom Longo stopped, also was convicted but released, under bonds, the case being filed.

HOPPE AND CASSIGNOL OF FRANCE MAY MEET IN INTERNATIONAL MATCH

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Negotiations are pending for an international contest of 1,500 points at 18.2 ball line billiards between William F. Hoppe, the world's champion, and Firmin Cassignol, conceded to be the best billiardist in France. If the game should be arranged it will take place early in April in Paris, for which city Hoppe will embark in a few days after his match with Orlando Morningstar for the 151 championship. The Morningstar match will be decided at Pittsburgh on March 10.

"KNUCKLES" ARE IN GOOD CONDITION

Tells of Difference in the White and Red Sox

Eddie Cicotte, dumping pitcher, submitted to an interview recently. After he came out from under the influence of the anesthetic he remarked:

"There is all difference possible between the Boston Red Sox and Chicago Sox. The Boston club is made up of two men, Carrigan and Wagner. They are the only players who work in unison. The others work for personal glory. For instance, if a young pitcher is working, Walsh or another of the older heads will coach the youngster along. Between innings he will tell of the weaknesses of individual batters and in other ways assist the recruit.

"You never hear anything like coaching in the Boston bench. If a pitcher is hit a trifle hard or if a fielder makes a blunder the other players criticize instead of slapping the fellow on the back or yelling words of encouragement."

Yet Boston won the pennant and Cicotte was on hand when the melon was sliced.

Jack Doyle, once one of the members of the famous Baltimore team which won pennants in the National league in the nineties, has been engaged by Manager Callahan as a scout for next season.

Doyle has tried his hand at almost every angle of the game and has succeeded in only one department, the playing end. Since he quit the game as a player he has been a manager and umpire, but did not succeed. But his judgment of players is excellent, and Callahan expects him to dig up a lot of phenoms for him.

Joe Tinker is starting well in handling the Cincinnati club. His preliminaries are full of promise. He knows just what he wants and just about how the team will line up at the start of the season. Joe isn't blustering or making predictions. He realizes what he is up against, which is the second hardest proposition in the National league, and he is studying to make good.

Tinker needs pitchers and perhaps an infielder, and there is a deal on which may remedy this. Also Tinker's new material looks rather promising. Some of the scribes appear to think Tinker will have trouble with certain players on the Reds, but if he does the trouble will be on the other side.

It is said that Johnny Evers may decide to play Roger Bresnahan in center field. Bresnahan is a rather versatile player, and he has in former years put in some time in the outfield.

Of course he has slowed up some since then, but Evers, who is figuring on putting the strongest possible hitting team into the field, figures that Archer can do most of the catching and that room must be made for Bresnahan in order to get the benefit of his slick work.

Umpire Connolly speaks highly of two of the Chicago White Sox youngsters. "Ray Schalk," said the umpire, "looks to be the best backstop to break into the big league in years. He is a natural ball player, and it is a pleasure to watch him work. Borton, the young first baseman, also looks good to me."

Lange to Help Sox

Bill Lange, the Ty Cobb of the baseball nineties and former Chicago idol, is "coming back" not as a player or manager, but as coach extraordinary to instruct recruit and veteran White Sox athletes in the finer points of base running during the ten day stay of Callahan's athletes at Paso Robles.

Wood Beats Flynn

AUGUSTA, Me., Feb. 27.—Ray Wood went hammer and tongs at Eddie Flynn last night at city hall, often forcing Flynn to the ropes and sending him to cover at frequent intervals. Flynn took a good deal of punishment and sports here believe he would have gone out in two more rounds.

Alger and Gallant Ready for Bout

The sports of this city are showing keen interest in the meeting between Gilbert Alger and George Gallant at the Lowell A. C. tomorrow night.

There has been so much heard and said about Gallant that the Lowell fans are really anxious to witness him in action. Against George Alger he will be forced to bring into play all the resources he possesses, otherwise he will be on the losing end of a decision. Alger is one of the headiest and craftiest boxers appearing in the American rings today.

After his contest with Battling Nelson the latter said that Alger was one of the best fighters he ever faced in his life. There are few of the good ones who Alger has failed to meet and the number of decisions against him are limited. At Worcester Alger defeated Young Melborough in a 10-round bout that was voted one of the best ever decided in that section of the country.

McDonough's victories over Jack Tritton and other good men stamped him as one of the best in the 135 pound class, but Alger, who has defeated these men, can not very well be lost sight of. It will be the first time that the Cambridge boxer has ever appeared in Lowell.

Alger is awaiting the time for his debut in a local ring. Alger has trained faithfully for the meeting with Gallant, having had the services of a veteran boxer, Dave Desler, whose ring fame is country wide. Desler is not a bit backward in predicting a sure win for the Cambridge boxer. A New Bedford club wanted this match, but the Lowell A. C. matchmaker had no option on Gallant's services and was fortunate in the extreme to secure so worthy an opponent as Alger to meet him Friday night in a 12-round bout.

YACHT RACE ON COAST

San Francisco will be well represented at the international yacht race which is to be held on the coast in 1913, during the world's fair.

It is known to yachtsmen all over the country, states that he will have charge of the $200,000 sloop which yachtsmen here are to build.

The boat to be built is to be a sloop, of similar line to the famous Shamrock and other boats of that class. The dimensions at present considered are as follows: Length over all, 120 feet; water line, 75 feet; beam, 22 feet; draft, 20 feet. These measurements are about 35 per cent. larger than the schooner race Searunner, which is the largest yacht in the bay at the present time.

The Shamrock and other boats of this class that have been built for the famous America's cup races are a little larger than these dimensions and run about 50 feet along the water line. The proposed yacht will be the largest sloop rigged yacht that ever has been built on the coast, and never in the history of yachting in California has a yacht of this class ever sailed on Pacific waters.

Jackson Rounding 'Into Form

Arnold N. S. Jackson, the Oxford university student who started the American athletic world by winning the 1500 meter run at the Stockholm Olympic games in 3 minutes 55 4-5 seconds, defeating Abel Klavint, Norman Taber and John Paul Jones in the order named, is rounding into form for the 1913 season.

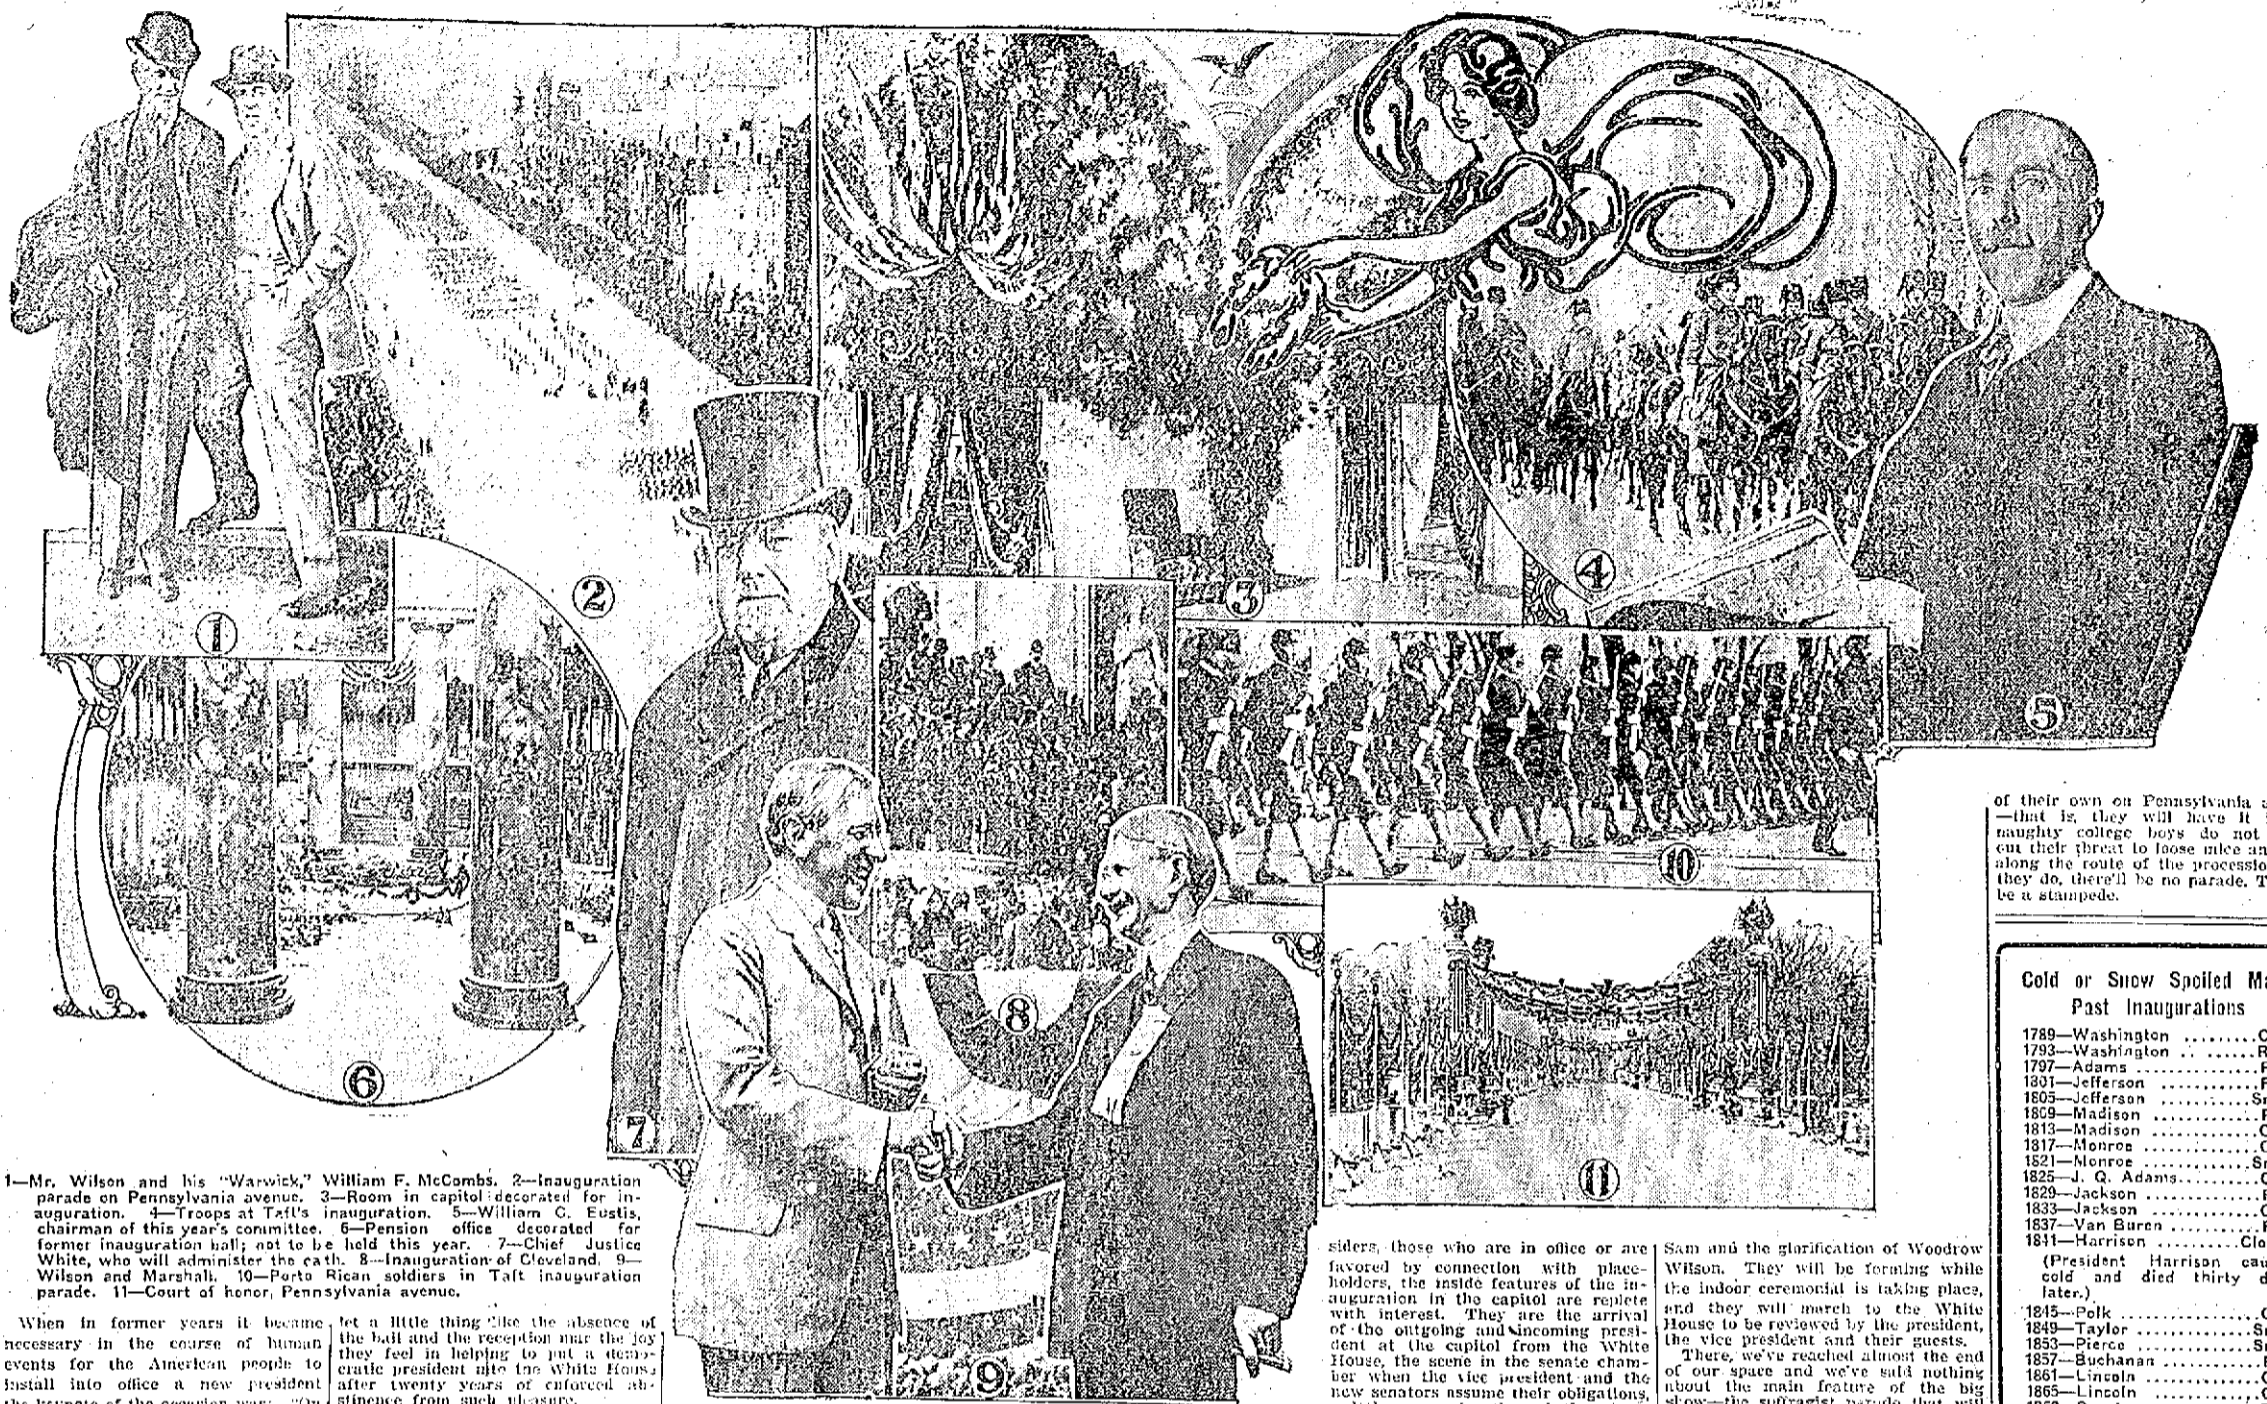

In a recent set of intracollege games Jackson won the 440 yards, 552 yards and one mile races in easy fashion. His times for the three races were 440 yards, 52 seconds; 552 yards, 2 minutes, 3 4-5 seconds; mile, 5 minutes flat.

Champions Are Kids

The champions of the present time are "kids." They are Willie Ritchie, lightweight champion, twenty-two years; Luther McCarthy, heavyweight champion, twenty years; Johnny Kilbane, featherweight champion, twenty-three years; Johnny Coulon, bantamweight champion, held the title before he was of age.

Elaborate Plans Being Made in Washington for the Inauguration of Woodrow Wilson as President of the United States---Interesting Facts of Past Inaugurals

1—Mr. Wilson and his "Warwick," William F. McCombs. 2—Inauguration parade on Pennsylvania avenue. 3—Room in capitol decorated for inauguration. 4—Troops at Taft's inauguration. 5—William C. Eustis, chairman of this year's committee. 6—Pension office decorated for former inauguration hall; not to be held this year. 7—Chief Justice White, who will administer the oath. 8—Inauguration of Cleveland. 9—Wilson and Marshall. 10—Porto Rican soldiers in Taft inauguration parade. 11—Court of honor, Pennsylvania avenue.

When in former years it became necessary in the course of human events for the American people to install into office a new president, the keynote of the occasion was: "On with the dance! Let joy be unconfined." This year it's different. They have performed a surgical operation on the inauguration, with Dr. Wilson at the butt end of the scalpel, and have excised the dance. When the simple ceremonies of the inauguration are completed the victors will be told: "Back to your homes. There'll be no dance tonight."

But don't hurry away yet with the idea that there'll be no inauguration worth speaking of, that Washington will wear its wonted aspect on March 4, 1913. It won't. The cutting out of the inaugural ball and the reception by the new president and his family will diminish the picturesque features of the inauguration, but it won't kill the ceremony by any means.

Pennsylvania avenue still stretches its mile and a quarter long from the capitol to the White House, affording one of the finest streets in the world to march on, and unless the weather is very severe indeed the broad plaza in front of the east entrance to the capitol will be jammed to hear Woodrow Wilson take the oath and deliver his inaugural address. Our democratic brethren and sisters are not going to let a little thing like the absence of the ball and the reception mar the joy they feel in helping to put a democratic president into the White House after twenty years of enforced abstinence from such pleasure.

The Inaugural Oath

If it isn't sacrilegious to say so, the donkey will bray very loudly when he sees Woodrow Wilson mount the stand, how his head in reverence before the Bible held in the hand of Chief Justice White and repeat the solemn words of the inaugural oath: "I do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of president of the United States and will to the best of my ability preserve, protect and defend the constitution of the United States." If Mr. Wilson likes, he may substitute the word "affirm" for the word "swear." The people of the United States hold that if a man is big enough to be elected to the high and mighty office of president of the world's biggest republic he's good enough to take office without swearing to this intention if he prefers promising to do so.

Perhaps this is as good a place as any to call attention to the fact that at least once on inauguration day the incoming vice president takes the center of the stage and shines the president out of the limelight. That is due to the fact that the vice president takes the oath first. You see, presidents and vice presidents are elected for four years, but the United States senate goes on forever, being a continuing body, unlike the house of representatives. So there must be someone to administer the oath of office to the incoming senators, who take their seats on March 4.

Naturally the man to administer the oath is the vice president of the United States, who is to preside over their sessions. So before proceeding to the real business of the day they swear in the new vice president. Whether he would become president if the new president died—rot yet president—should drop dead before taking his own oath is a theoretical question that may be left to those interested in such matters. Alas! even as the Romans said—let's hope it never happens.

The inaugural ball and reception will be eliminated this year at the express wish of Mr. Wilson, who objected to the expense of closing up for two weeks the pension office, the only building in Washington with an open hall big enough to house the dancers. The cost of the inaugural ball to the government has been estimated as high as $100,000, and Mr. Wilson asserted that it was a needless expenditure.

The inaugural reception at the White House, heretofore deemed also an indispensable feature of inauguration evening, has been abandoned on the ground that the president and his family, wearied by a day of excitement and strain, should not be required to stand in line and receive thousands of visitors.

Some Ceremonial Features

That leaves, as has been said, the big parade, the taking of the oath and the delivery of the inaugural address as the main features of the show for the multitude. Of course for the insiders, those who are in office or are favored by connection with place-holders, the inside features of the inauguration in the capitol are replete with interest. They are the arrival of the outgoing and incoming president at the capitol from the White House, the scene in the senate chamber when the vice president and the new senators assume their obligations, and the procession through the rotunda under the wonderful dome of the capitol to the east portico where the ceremonies are concluded by the delivery of the address by the president.

Of course there is a vast deal of ceremonial and red tape and formality, such as the entry into the senate chamber of the dignified, stately members of the supreme court, the arrival of the diplomatic corps in brilliant, full court dress and the marshaling of the procession of officials by the marshal of the United States supreme court and the marshal of the District of Columbia. These are observances that have come down to the present generation of Americans from the days of Washington and Adams and that must be followed now lest the man who remembers the inauguration of Buchanan be shocked.

It's a toss up whether the parade will be a success. It all depends on the weather. It's mighty hard to get enthusiasm when one is chilled through from long waiting in the stand on Pennsylvania avenue in case the sun averts his face from the inauguration of a president. Who does not remember March 4, 1909, when every variety of execrable weather completely spoiled the outdoor features of President Taft's inauguration? But if it should prove one of the bright, crisp, sunny March days with which Washington is blessed sometimes thousands of soldiers, sailors, cadets, midshipmen, militiamen and civilians will march up Pennsylvania avenue for the honor of Uncle

Sam and the glorification of Woodrow Wilson. They will be forming while the indoor ceremonial is taking place, and they will march to the White House to be reviewed by the president, the vice president and their guests.

There, we've reached almost the end of our space and we've said nothing about the main feature of the big show—the suffragist parade that will take place on March 3, provided there is enough of a suffragist to smile then. But, of course, all the world knows already that on the day before inauguration day the women who want to vote will have a parade of their own on Pennsylvania avenue—that is, they will have it if the naughty college boys do not carry out their threat to loose mice and rats along the route of the procession. If they do, there'll be no parade. There'll be a stampede.

THE DISTRICT NURSING

Association Takes Up Social Work

HELPING FAMILIES THROUGH OTHER AGENCIES

Annual Meeting Held in Boston Yesterday Afternoon—Nurses Must Teach Better Methods of Living

BOSTON, Feb. 27.—A wide range of actively in charitable and philanthropic work was described in reports at the 27th annual meeting of the Instructive District Nursing association, held at the Vendome at 3.30 yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Katherine B. Codman, the president, reported the association has 70 nurses working. It has spent about $32,000 for current expenses during the past year and will need $35,000 for the year to come.

A year ago, said Mrs. Codman, the association faced a debt of $4200 and had committed itself to the further expenditure of $2500. The special endowment fund, started at the 25th anniversary, has reached $67,000 and was sufficient to meet the extra expense. Enough money has been raised to cover all expenses for the year and return to the general fund $1200. "With the exception of the director's salary, we have spent less than we did the year before," she says. "We have brought the two big branches of our work together," she continued, "the work of the staff nurses and that of the students. We have established branch stations in seven centers, with head nurses in each. We have appreciated and have undertaken to shoulder our responsibility toward the social condition of each family we visit, which involves more time spent by the nurses."

Memorial to Miss Cary

The association has joined with Simmons college in establishing an eight months' course for nurses. Scholarships are given to four nurses who live in the home free of charge. There has been an increase of 400 in the number of patients cared for.

"We have one committee," says Mrs. Codman, "which is never appeased, that always stands with hands wide open, begging for old cotton and linen and often for infants' clothing, sheets and pillow cases, women's night gowns, etc., but always old cotton and linen." The gift of $500 by Miss Kimball, in memory of her nephew, Francis Cummings, was particularly appreciated. King's chapel, the Arlington Street church and the Woman's Society of Temple Israel, are especially thanked.

Mrs. Codman pays a tribute to Miss Anne P. Cary, first vice president of the association, another of whose philanthropies was the Massachusetts infant asylum. As a memorial to her the committee devoted the fund of $10,175 contributed by Miss Cary's friends to pre-natal nursing, and the income will suffice to support such a nurse for six months every year.

Miss Hope to the Discharged
Miss Bessie S. LeLachuer, head of the educational department, in her report says:

"By teaching better standards and methods of living and by encouraging struggling, discouraged people, no one can estimate what has been done in the past by individual district nurses toward the prevention of disease and dependency. The nurse must learn what other people or agencies stand ready to give and how she can best connect her families with them."

Miss Mary Beard, director, said:

"Pre-natal nursing is receiving more consideration than ever. We do not feel that thorough work has been done if we leave a family cured of the illness only and still living under unhygienic or unsanitary conditions sure to produce illness again in a little while. To meet these demands upon us, trained observation is a necessary qualification of the nurse of today."

The election of officers resulted as follows:

Mrs. Katherine B. Codman, president; Gertrude W. Peabody and Emily G. Denny, vice presidents; Ellen Hale, secretary; Frances L. Adams, Fannie Bartlett, Mary E. Bristow, Rosamond Bradley, Ellen Bullard, George W. Cary, Elizabeth F. Corder, Alice DeFord, Alice DeNormandie, Cornelia L. Donald, Sally H. Ehrlich, Isabel McCurdy Grandin, Mary L. Hall, Bortha J. R. Lucas, Elizabeth O. Monks, Marlin P. Moller, Susanah R. Norcross, Margaret C. Osgood, Mary Pamela Lane, Rosa Ritchie, Evelyn R. Thayer, Anita S. Ward, Anna S. Weld, managers; Ingersoll Bowditch, treasurer.

After the business session there was an address by Dr. Milton J. Rosenau, professor of preventive medicine and hygiene of the Harvard Medical school.

ON FOREIGN DIVORCES

Important Decision by Supreme Court

BOSTON, Feb. 27.—A decision of great importance to applicants for divorce who go to other states and there seek a legal separation has been sent down by the supreme judicial court.

In effect, the supreme court rules that a person who goes to another state, even with her husband, separates from him there and later seeks a divorce and alimony while he still lives in this state and does not appear at the trial or authorize anyone to appear for him, is not legally divorced, according to the laws of this commonwealth.

The case was that of Dr. Luther O. Martin, formerly of Putnam, who is declared to be entitled to recover mortgage deeds, notes and bank shares which his wife, Viola F. Martin, claimed as alimony and as a gift. The case was first heard by a master, who ruled that Mrs. Martin's Colorado divorce was invalid and ineffective and that the Colorado court had no jurisdiction over Dr. Martin.

The personal property which he recovers was in his wife's name but he claimed ownership. It amounts to several thousand dollars.

Dr. Martin went to Colorado in 1908 with his wife and there they separated. She remained there and he returned to Springfield. After he had gone she instituted divorce proceedings and was awarded alimony which included most of the securities.

The master ruled that the Colorado court had no jurisdiction over Dr. Martin or his personal property and could not award the same as alimony. The master also found that when Martin went to Colorado he left the key and combination of his safe or strong box with his mother-in-law, Mrs. Nathan Barker, and that she took the papers without authority and sent them to her daughter.

The court says that the master's findings are largely of fact and their correctness it has no means of determining, but on questions of law it finds he committed no error, and sustains the master's report which is in favor of Dr. Martin.

MOTHER DRINKS POISON

Kills Herself on Edge of Baby's Grave

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 27.—Standing on the edge of the open grave into which the body of her 18 months old baby boy had just been lowered, Mrs. Fannie Pollock, 23 years old, yesterday committed suicide by drinking poison.

The final words of the funeral service were being spoken and she was surrounded by members of her family and close friends when she drew a phial from her muff and drained the contents.

Mrs. Pollock's husband, from whom she had been separated for some time, seized her in time to prevent her from falling into the grave. She died before reaching a hospital.

The baby was the young mother's only child and was accidentally burned to death while she was working in a factory.

Two Small Fires
Shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon the fire department was called to extinguish a small grass fire at the corner of Rogers and High streets in a vacant lot. A second similar blaze of no greater importance was discovered about 10 o'clock at night in Mammoth road and this, too, was extinguished without difficulty.

CHARLES H. RICHARDSON LAID ON THE TABLE

FROM SALISBURY BEACH RESERVATION BILL

The remains of Charles H. Richardson, the late county commissioner, were laid at rest in the Edison cemetery yesterday afternoon. The funeral which was largely attended took place from the home, 156 Methuen street.

Service was held at the First Trinitarian church of which deceased was a constant attendant, and was conducted by Rev. Clarence K. Williams, and Rev. Caleb J. Fisher, D. D., pastor of the First Universalist church. Appropriate hymns were sung by Mrs. J. H. Coughlin of Clinton, Mr. Arthur C. Spalding presiding at the organ. The following organizations, of which deceased was a member, were represented by delegations: Mount Hope Royal Arch chapter, Abnerus council and Midget commandery. Among those attending the funeral were District Attorney John J. Higgins; Chairman Levi Gould and Chester B. Williams of the Middlesex county commission; Joseph O. Hayden, treasurer of Middlesex county; John R. Fairburn, sheriff of Middlesex county; City Commissioners Lawrence Cummings and James E. Donnelly. The bearers were Messrs. George E. Ames, William D. Brown, Frederick G. Cohen, Frank O. Kendall, William R. Means, George F. Morgan, Edward J. Noyes and John Riddell. The burial was in the family lot in the Edison cemetery. The funeral arrangements were in charge of Chas. A. Byrdell, keeper of the Middlesex county jail, under the direction of Undertaker George W. Henley.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., believes European Methods Can Be Utilized in New York.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—If an attempt is made to reorganize the New York police department through legislation, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., believes that the experiences of European cities should be utilized in framing such laws. In a statement which he issued yesterday on behalf of the Bureau of Social Hygiene, he asks that whatever remedial measures are taken now be decided upon by the bureau of the results of its investigations.

FOREIGN CREDITS

Valuable Book Issued by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce

A book of very practical value to every firm in the export trade or planning to enter the foreign field has just been issued by the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce. It deals with a much-discussed subject—the credit problem—but presents it in a new way. Part of the book is devoted to an exposition by Commercial Agent Archibald J. Wolfe of credit methods and facilities in Germany, England and France, in which he shows how and by whom long terms of credit are granted in the export markets, what facilities make these extended credits possible, and the benefits or disadvantages of the system. The report also includes a review by Mr. Wolfe of present methods of financing foreign shipments from the United States and an analysis of numerous letters from American manufacturers with regard to their credit practices in export trade. Furthermore, an important series of consular reports from all parts of the world is included. In these reports American consular officers describe fully the local credit conditions. Thus the subject is considered from different angles and the reader is given an accurate idea as to what the exporters in foreign countries can and cannot do in granting credit, what American exporters are doing and can do, and what the foreign importer is accustomed to expect in the matter of credit from the American exporter. Supplementing the book are examples of forms for use in financing foreign shipments and lists of banks in the United States having foreign departments and of foreign banks undertaking the collection of drafts.

The report presents the general factors and principles involved, and also gives definite data that are of immediate practical value. It presents a ready-made solution for the credit problem; rather it sets forth the facts and outlines the principles that should govern foreign credit dealings.

Copies of the book (Special Agents Series No. 52) may be obtained upon application to the superintendent of documents, government printing office, for 30 cents a copy.

Women of Middle Age

From 40 to 50 Woman's Critical Period.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, severe headaches, melancholia, dread of impending evil, palpitation of the heart, irregularity, constipation and dizziness are promptly treated by intelligent women who are approaching the period of life.

This is the most critical period of woman's life and she who neglects the care of her health at this time invites incurable disease and pain. Why not be guided by the experience of others and take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? It is an indisputable fact that this grand old remedy has helped thousands of women to pass through this trying period with comfort and safety. Thousands of genuine and honest testimonials support this fact.

From Mrs. HENRY HEAVILIN, Cadiz, Ohio.

Fort Worth, Texas.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and derived great benefit from its use. It carried me safely through the Change of Life when I was in bad health. I had that all gone feeling most of the time, and headache constantly, I was very nervous and the hot flashes were very bad. I had tried other remedies and doctors, but did not improve until I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has now been some time since I took the Compound and I have had no return of my old complaints. I always praise your remedies to weak women."—Mrs. Henry Heavilin, R. F. D. No. 5, Cadiz, Ohio.

From Mrs. EDWARD B. HILBERT, Fleetwood, Pa.

Fleetwood, Pa.—"During the Change of Life I was hardly able to be around at all. I always had a headache and I was so dizzy and nervous that I had no rest at night. The flashes of heat were so bad sometimes that I did not know what to do.

"One day a friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it made me a strong, well woman. I am very thankful that I followed my friend's advice, and I shall recommend it as long as I live. Before I took the Compound I was always sickly and now I have not had medicine from a doctor for years. You may publish my letter."—Mrs. Edward B. Hilbert, Fleetwood, Pa.

From Mrs. F. P. MULLENDORE, Munford, Ala.

Munford, Ala.—"I was so weak and nervous while passing through the Change of Life that I could hardly live. My husband had to pull rubber on all the gates for I could not stand to have a gate slam.

"I also had backache and a fullness in my stomach. I noticed that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was advertised for such cases and I sent and got a bottle. It did me so much good that I kept on taking it and found it to be all you claim. I recommend it to all women afflicted as I was."—Mrs. F. P. Mullemdore, Munford, Ala.

All these testimonials are guaranteed genuine and truthful. The original of each came to us entirely unsolicited. They are sincere expressions of gratitude for actual benefits received from the medicine.

A BIG PIANO SALE

PIANO TRUST CAN'T DOWN THE

Roxbury Storage Salesrooms

The Fight Grows Harder and More Bitter

A Great Chance for the Public to Buy at Cut Prices

A piano sale here is always a sacrifice, always a bargain sale, always a make-down sale. The very nature of the business here is one of sacrifice. The business here is not conducted like the business of a regular piano store where they are expected to make a profit on every piano sold. Here we don't let any piano loaf around our doors; a sacrifice tag is clipped on which on the face of it reads competition and it is sold to the first who man or woman for the price marked on the tag. Prices don't mean anything at these sales. We cut and double and triple on all makes alike; we ask no favors, we want none, and we give none. In sales like these someone's loss is your gain, the profit is all yours. The finest instruments of the world's best makers are in the sacrifice list.

PAINTERS, DECORATORS AND PAPER HANGERS
Estimates on all kinds of jobs, large or small, at 170 Appleton street.

From Congressman McCall and letters from Chairman Thomas P. Riley of the democratic state committee and Chairman Charles S. Bird of the progressive state committee, all favoring the project.

Opposition to the bill was conducted by ex-Senator George L. Barnes. Predicting that equal suffrage would result in increased voting with no good result, Mrs. A. J. George of Brookline, representing the Association of Women Opposed to Woman Suffrage, declared that women may "gain their rights without the ballot." She said the petitioners wish the question submitted to men voters only.

Miss Minnie Bronson of Washington said women who oppose equal suffrage should not be labelled "social parasites," because they believe the measure progressive in name only. "There are less than 3,000,000 even sympathetically allied with the equal suffrage movement," she declared.

"Property rights," she added, "are better in male suffrage states than in equal suffrage states."

Hon. Arthur Wellman of Malden spoke in opposition, and Mr. Barnes closed the morning session in behalf of the restriction, after Mrs. Mary J. Henderson chairman of the Back Bay League, the colored women's anti-suffrage association granting women voting rights.

Both sides of the question were heard in rebuttal at the afternoon session.

On behalf of equal suffrage, ex-Senator Roger Sherman Hoar spoke for the Massachusetts Political Equality association. Miss Rose Brennan for the Fall River women's textile workers, Miss Nellie Boland for Holyoke paper workers, Miss Mary Matthews for telephone operators, Mrs. O'Dell for the Lowell Central Labor union, Mrs. Alice Parker Leaser for women attorneys and Mrs. Theresa Crowley.

Speaking against the measure in rebuttal were Mrs. A. J. George, Miss Minnie Bronson and ex-Senator George L. Barnes.

TUBERCULOSIS FOWLS
Disease Develops Slowly and They Linger for Months Before They Die

The number of affected fowls received at the veterinary division laboratory would lead one to suspect that this disease is becoming quite prevalent in various parts of the state. Numerous cases of liver troubles which have been diagnosed by poultrymen as "going light," spotted liver, fatty liver, and rheumatism, have proved to be tuberculosis, says Dr. W. L. Boyd of the University of Minnesota farm.

Tuberculous fowls are usually found on premises where the disease is present and has been present in either cattle or hogs, or both. The disease is caused by germs or minute vegetable organisms known as the bacterium tuberculosis. This organism is strictly parasitic and does not find conditions favorable for growth outside of the animal body but it may live in the soil protected from sunshine for a number of years.

The disease or infection may be transmitted directly from a tuberculous fowl to healthy ones, but it is undoubtedly more frequently spread through the foodstuffs which are obtained from the droppings of the tuberculous cattle or hogs. The droppings of the diseased birds contain the germs which serve as a means of dissemination.

Some of the outbreaks have been brought to notice through the findings of this disease among cattle and hogs, by means of the tuberculin test.

The general appearance of the fowls received at this laboratory for diagnosis and experimental purposes, has not been such as would lead one to suspect that they were sick with tuberculosis or any other disease. In one instance one of the fowls had a very pale comb and was extremely thin, a condition which has been popularly termed "going light" by poultry raisers.

The disease develops slowly among fowls and is not easily detected until it is too late to do much good.

BOMB HURLED INTO BUILDING

Attempt to Injure Strike Breakers —24 Girls Sleeping in Rooms, Fuse Went Out

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—A second attempt to injure strikebreakers employed by manufacturers resisting the garment workers' strike, was made early today when an infernal machine with sputtering fuse attached was hurled through a window in a loft building at East 144th street, where 21 girl strike breakers were sleeping. Fortunately the fuse went out and the bomb did not go off.

According to a watchman, the bomb was thrown by a man who drove up to the building in a black automobile.

Preceding this bomb episode by another hour a similar contrivance wrecked the entrance of a loft building on West 154th street. There were nearly 100 strike breakers in the building but none was injured.
